Nation held firmly in grip of cold

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Numbing cold stung the nation's midsection today dropping temperatures to record lows.

Official temperatures in Appleton ranged from plus 16 to 13 degrees below zero, with unofficial temperatures in the area dropping 4 to 5 degrees lower.

The cold wave followed a week of arctic temperatures, heavy snow, sleet and drenching rains across the eastern half of the nation, downpours of rain in Southern California and deep snow in the California mountains.

The rains and snow hit California again today and spilled into the Pacific Northwest and Nevada. The California Highway Patrol opened some roads in the snowbound San Bernardino Mountains but warned that the roads would be closed again without notice as soon as resort spots were filled.

But the weather calmed somewhat in the eastern half of the country, except for persistent cold.

Temperatures dropped to -30 long before daybreak at Lincoln, Neb., breaking the record of 29 below set in 1892 there.

Readings were even lower than -30 in North Dakota, over 20 below at Minneapolis and below zero at Kansas City and Denver.

Snow whitened northwest Texas and rain washed northern Florida, southern Georgia and South Carolina.

Light snow dusted much of Michigan and the northern Ohio Valley and the northern half of the Appalachians and northern New England. More than 9 inches fell on Caribou, Maine, through Friday.

A tornado at Montezuma, Ga., Friday tore up a mobile home and house and a pecan tree grove. No injuries were reported.

Heavy rains that flooded western Tennessee Thursday seeped into an underground telephone cable to the Memphis Fire Department's communications center, knocking out most of the emergency telephones Friday. About 50 fire vehicles, with lights flashing, patrolled neighborhoods looking for fires until most lines were restored.

Upstream communities around Charleston, W.Va., began scraping and hosing away two days' of mud while downstream points on the Guyandotte and Big Sandy rivers prepared for more water. Flooding in West Virginia already has forced from 300 to 400 persons from their homes.

Temperatures before dawn ranged from -32 at Bismarck, N.D., to 75 at Key West, Fla.

Some other reports: Anchorage 16 clear, Atlanta 41 cloudy, Boston 23 clear, Buffalo 17 snow, Chicago 3 clear, Cincinnati 24 snow, Cleveland 22 snow, Dallas 24 clear, Denver -1 clear, Detroit 17 snow, Honolulu 74 rain, Indianapolis 10 clear, Kansas City 10 clear, Los Angeles 54 cloudy, Louisville 26 snow, Miami 72 clear, Minneapolis-St. Paul -21 clear, Nashville 27 cloudy, New York 26 clear, Philadelphia 33 partly cloudy, Phoenix 45 clear, Pittsburgh 23 snow, St. Louis zero, San Francisco 46 rain, Seattle 31 cloudy, Washington 38 clear.

Fat-fighter has mouth wired shut

DETROIT (AP) — Mrs. John Horn says she has been fighting fat all her life but nothing really worked until she told her dentist: "Shut my mouth."

Mrs. Horn says she's already lost 17 pounds since she had her jaws wired shut two weeks ago.

She weighed just over 200 pounds when she began her diet.

But the suburban Gibraltar housewife admits that, even with her jaws wired, she manages to cheat on her diet.

Along with diet soft drinks, tomato juice and other low-calorie liquids, Mrs. Horn says she has also downed three beers.

Mrs. Horn says she got the idea from reading news accounts about an overweight woman in England who had her teeth cemented together to stop her from overeating.

She and her husband have one daughter, Emily, 2. Mrs. Horn says she wants another baby, but she has had two miscarriages.

"I think it was being overweight, although my doctor never said so," she said. "That's really why I went for this: I want to have another baby."

So, while having some dental work done by Dr. Gilbert Klieff of Trenton, Mrs. Horn mentioned the English woman and asked the oral surgeon if he knew of a dentist who could do the same for her.

Klieff said he could do the work. So, after getting her doctor's okay and one last binge at a restaurant, Mrs. Horn was fitted with what looks like oversized braces.

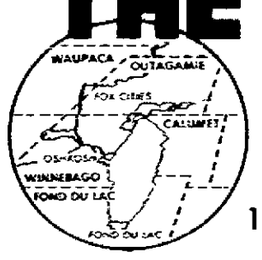

"Everybody says, 'You're so brave!' But if I'd known how much it was going to hurt those first couple of days —wow," she said.

"It's been worth it," said Mrs. Horn, who says she had a weight problem all her life. She figures that at the rate she is losing weight now, she should be 85 pounds lighter in three months.

Mrs. Horn said that the first few days after having her jaws wired shut she could hardly talk, let alone eat.

"And I really thought I'd have room for a straw or something," she said. "But nothing! You dribble and slurp a lot until you get the hang of it."

Congress to probe crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Intense congressional scrutiny of the energy crisis appears in the offing, with four committees planning hearings.

The Senate permanent investigations subcommittee will begin its hearings Jan. 21, the day Congress starts its new session, Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said Friday.

Officials of the seven largest U.S. oil companies will be questioned at the hearings, Jackson said, in "an in-depth congressional investigation to determine whether there is in fact an oil shortage."

A House committee, a unit of the Senate-House Economic Committee and a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee also have announced they will conduct hearings to try and get information about the energy situation.

"There is a total lack of public confidence in the oil industry, in the federal agencies regulating the industry, and in the validity of the spiraling costs of gasoline and hearing oil," Jackson commented.

"People are not going to make sacrifices unless they get some honest, factual, straightforward answers about the extent of the shortage and who is benefitting from the shortage," he added.

Meanwhile, the Federal Energy Office delayed issuance of its final petroleum allocations, the Labor Department indicated the energy crisis has cost American workers thousands of jobs and Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe said the Justice Department is investigating major oil firms.

A second congressional hearing will be held next week by the House Small Business Select Committee. A number of government and industry witnesses are slated to testify at the hearings beginning Wednesday.

A subcommittee of the Senate-House Economic Committee will hold its hearings Jan. 14 and 21 with energy administrator William E. Simon and consumer advocate Ralph Nader among the first witnesses.

The subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee plans a probe before the end of the month of the role of multinational corporations in the energy crisis.

The FEO announcement that its final petroleum allocations will not be issued until Tuesday, four days late, means there will be no transitional period for distributors and the public to get accustomed to the new rules. They are to take effect as planned.

Householders who heat with oil will be expected to lower their thermostats six degrees starting Tuesday. In other buildings heat must be reduced 10 degrees unless savings can be made some other way.

Representatives of trade groups will come to Washington for a crash course

Kissinger in Egypt for talks

ASWAN, Egypt (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and President Anwar Sadat conferred in a garden gazebo today on how to prevent a partial Israeli troop withdrawal from turning into the status quo in the Sinai.

Egyptians have privately expressed concern that Israel might withdraw 18 miles or so from the Suez Canal front and then dig in west of the Sinai passes.

Reopening of the Suez Canal should come only in an over-all peace settlement including a phased withdrawal in the Sinai acceptable to Egypt, the government-controlled press has repeatedly observed.

Kissinger briefed Sadat for over an hour after his arrival Friday night and sources said they discussed four basic questions:

—How far should the initial separation of forces oblige Israelis and Egyptians to pull back.

—How to link separation of forces and Israeli withdrawal from the Suez Canal to an overall settlement.

—The size and type of buffer zone that a United Nations emergency force would be expected to occupy.

—The type and quantity of weapons to be permitted in the area on either side of the U.N. buffer zone.

Kissinger, after lunch with Sadat, was to fly to Jerusalem. If successful in both places, he is expected to return to Egypt on Sunday evening or Monday, meet Sadat again and go once more to Israel in hopes of tying up a disengagement package.

Kissinger and Sadat appeared to be fit and in good humor as they prepared for today's talks about 11 a.m. in a garden overlooking the Aswan High Dam.

Taps reported between Kissinger, Pentagon

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Sun-Times reported today that a wave of mutual spying and suspicion between the White House and Pentagon led in 1971 to a telephone tap being placed in the office of then Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird.

The Sun-Times said a former White House official claimed Henry A. Kissinger ordered the tap on Laird's office to determine whether secret diplomatic dealings were being leaked to the Pentagon. Kissinger, who was national security adviser then, was involved with negotiating the Vietnam settlement at the time.

The Sun-Times also said another White House aide revealed that a wireless microphone was found some time earlier in the base of a lamp in the White House office of Wayne Smith, a Kissinger staff assistant for program analysis.

Smith's office was supposedly the site for all of the technical planning for Kissinger's negotiations on the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) and on Vietnam, the newspaper said.

The Sun-Times said an investigation failed to turn up who planted the microphone, but high-ranking military officials were suspected.

Earlier, sources in Washington said a 1971 White House investigation of news leaks revealed that the Pentagon had unauthorized access to information from National Security Council meetings.

The sources said that the incident involved information about National Security Council discussions being leaked to the news media by a low level employe at the Defense Department.

A White House spokesman, however, said that news accounts of the incident were based on fragmentary evidence. The spokesman refused to disclose the full story.

The spokesman did say that information had been provided on a confidential basis to the special Watergate prosecutor, the chairmen of the House and Senate Armed Services Committees and the chairman and vice chairman of the Senate Watergate committee.

A source said the White House plumbers unit traced the news leaks to the Pentagon and subsequently an aide to then national security adviser Henry A. Kissinger "all of a sudden disappeared."

The discovery of the security breach came as the plumbers were trying to trace leaks of documents on the India-Pakistan war. The leaked material had been published by columnist Jack Anderson.

Another source said Rear Adm. Robert O. Welander was transferred from his post as liaison officer for the Joint Chiefs of Staff at the council after his notes on council proceedings were leaked to Anderson by a third party. The leak was eventually traced to a Navy man at the Pentagon, sources said.

Lucey car bought after directive

MADISON, Wis. (AP) —Gov. Patrick J. Lucey's office acknowledged Friday that Lucey signed approval for purchase of a large-size automobile after ordering state agencies to buy fuel-conserving compacts.

His new secretary, Jeffrey Smoller, outlined a list of events which he said led to the purchase a 1974 Chevrolet sedan.

Smoller originally had said the car, with an engine powerful enough to meet security measures and communication equipment required in a gubernatorial car, had been ordered prior to Lucey's compact-car directive to bureaucrats Sept. 5.

But a review of data, Smoller said, seems to support statements by Republicans that Lucey's big-car purchase was actually not signed until as late as Sept. 20.

While Republicans have chided the Democratic governor about the purchase, the state Purchasing Department has announced that the GOP-s top office holder, Atty. Gen. Robert W. Warren, has ordered a 1974 station wagon, also with power-consuming extras!

Lucey ordered Secretary of Administration Joe E. Nusbaum to purchase compact cars for state use wherever possible as an energy conservation measure Sept. 5, Smoller said.

Lucey's new official car has a 454-cubic-inch engine, largest in the Chevrolet line.

It was made at General Motors' plant in Janesville, replacing a 1972 Chevrolet which had registered more than 55,000 miles, Smoller said.

A Madison auto dealer estimated the new car gets about 10 miles to a gallon of gasoline in city driving.

Republican Sen. Roger Murphy of Waukesha had said in a news release the decision to purchase a "luxury model car" rather than a compact "reinforces the old adage that actions speak louder than words."

Smoller said he had been misinformed about the order date, but that many details had been carried out before Sept. 5.

"In cases such as this, much work is done ahead of time which would be very difficult to reverse," he said.

Smoller said the auto was agreed upon by the Department of Administration, state patrol officers and the Capitol security office.

U.S. admits flights over Laos for reconnaissance

UDORN AIR FORCE BASE, Thailand (AP) —The United States Air Force has acknowledged flying regular reconnaissance missions over Laos, which diplomatic sources in Vientiane say violates the country's Feb. 21 cease-fire agreement.

The unarmed flights, said to be the best way to gather intelligence about North Vietnamese troop and supply movements in Laos, have been bitterly denounced by the Communist Pathet Lao.

Brig. Gen. James R. Hildreth, commander of the Air Force's 13th Advance Echelon at Udorn Air Base in northeastern Thailand, said this week that unarmed RF4E Phantom jets from his base carry out regular photo reconnaissance missions over Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam.

Ouday Souvannavong, the Royal Lao government's spokesman, said ending the flights is completely up to the Americans. "We ignore completely what the United States Air Force is doing over Laos or over anywhere else," he said.

An Air Force spokesman described the RF4E as "the newest and most improved Phantom in the inventory," able to fly at speeds up to 1,300 miles per hour and equipped with sensitive optical and infrared cameras. He said the plane can carry out reconnaissance in all weather at high or low altitudes.

"These flights are permitted under the Vietnam cease-fire agreement," said Col. Robert W. Clement, the commander of the 432nd Tactical Reconnaissance Wing. The agreement on ending the war in Vietnam says there shall be no reconnaissance flights over North Vietnam but is vague about South Vietnam. There is no cease-fire agreement in Cambodia.

But as for Laos, diplomatic sources in Vientiane say there are no provisions for reconnaissance flights over Laos under the terms of the separate Laotian protocols.

Article 14 of the protocols says: "Movements by air forces, including reconnaissance and supply flights by one side which violate the air space of the other side's zone, are forbidden until the determination of the route has been made officially...."

No. 1 Rockets fall to Papermakers

BY GEORGE MANCOSKY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEENAH — Master of the press through the years, Neenah's Rockets had the tables turned on them by a determined group of Kimberly Papermakers and were handed their first defeat, 50-44, Friday night.

The setback ended a 9-game winning string assembled by the Twin Citians, ranked No. 1 in the Associated Press' first weekly poll.

For the fourth-seeded Papermakers, who should move higher as a result of the conquest, it valuted them back into first place with their victims in the Fox Valley Association race.

The state's feature clash was witnessed by a crowd estimated to be in excess of 3,600 (the fieldhouse comfortably seats 3,200. People were turned away starting at 7 o'clock.

The pressing defense employed by Coach Jack Wippich's Papermakers helped produce 18 Neenah first half turnovers and saw the hosts limited to a slim 15 points for two periods of work.

And, you have to study the records closely to find out the last time the Rockets had been held to 15 points in the first half of play.

After building a 30-15 halftime bulge, the visitors saw the momentum swing in Neenah's direction for a time in the third period and their big lead was reduced to four points.

With the aid of three baskets, two by Kim Vanden Boogaard, the victors built their advantage back up to 10 points at the quarter's end.

But, Neenah kept chipping away again in the last segment and narrowed the margin to three points (47-44) with 42 seconds left.

In order to keep the Papermakers from completely using up the clock, the locals had to stop it with fouls and Bill Reed put the game on ice with a pair of gifters for a 5-point spread with 31 seconds remaining.

"Our press bothered them early and resulted in bad passes and traveling," a happy coach Wippich said. He added that Neenah's inability to make free throws in the first half also helped his team's cause.

Wippich declared that his team wasn't as aggressive as he would have liked in the second half, noting they were standing around too much and weren't going to the basket.

"But if we can win without being aggressive, I'll take it," he explained.

"We controlled the tempo of the game to a certain extent," the Menasha native pointed out. "Usually we do what they (the opponents) are doing."

The Kimberly mentor said he didn't have to scream or shout to get his team up." They knew they were playing the No. 1 team in the state and the No. 1 team in our conference and they got up by themselves," he stated.

"We played a good team and we showed a lot of desire," Wippich concluded.

"We didn't handle their press, our records show we had 18 turnovers in the first half," Rocket Coach Ron Einerson said of his team's performance.

Einerson bemoaned Neenah's lack of free throw accuracy in the first half and the inability to get shots against the Kimberly defense. "You can't score if you aren't getting the shots," he declared.

"At halftime, I thought we could come back, and we did," the Neenah coach stated.

Their poor second quarter (and conversely a super frame by Kimberly was one of the big factors in doing the Rockets in.

In that period, Neenah turned the ball over 10 times, made only five of 12 free throws (four times missing the first shot of the bonus situation) and were given only five field goal chances, making one.

The Papermakers, whose only deficits were 2-0 and 4-2, collected 17 points, made five non-too-costly turnovers and hit seven of their 15 attempts from the floor.

Chuck Ruys, who was the game's scoring leader, picked up 11 of his 16 points in the second segment.

Sparked by Larry Madsen and Tom Volkmann, Neenah trimmed the Kimberly margin to 36-32 with 2:19 left in the third quarter. But, Vanden Boogaard's two baskets helped the invaders pull back to a 42-32 advantage.

Neenah made the first six points of the final segment and the margin stayed at four or six points until Pat Gaffney's free throw for 47-42 with 1:44 left.

From then on, after just about every basket or free throw situation either Wippich or Einerson called a time out.

Two free throws by Neenah's Ken Zoromski reduced the score to 47-44 but then Reed, who had been relegated to the bench with four fouls in the third period, but who played all of the fourth without getting a fifth, made his two key gifters. Vanden Boogaard added a final point.

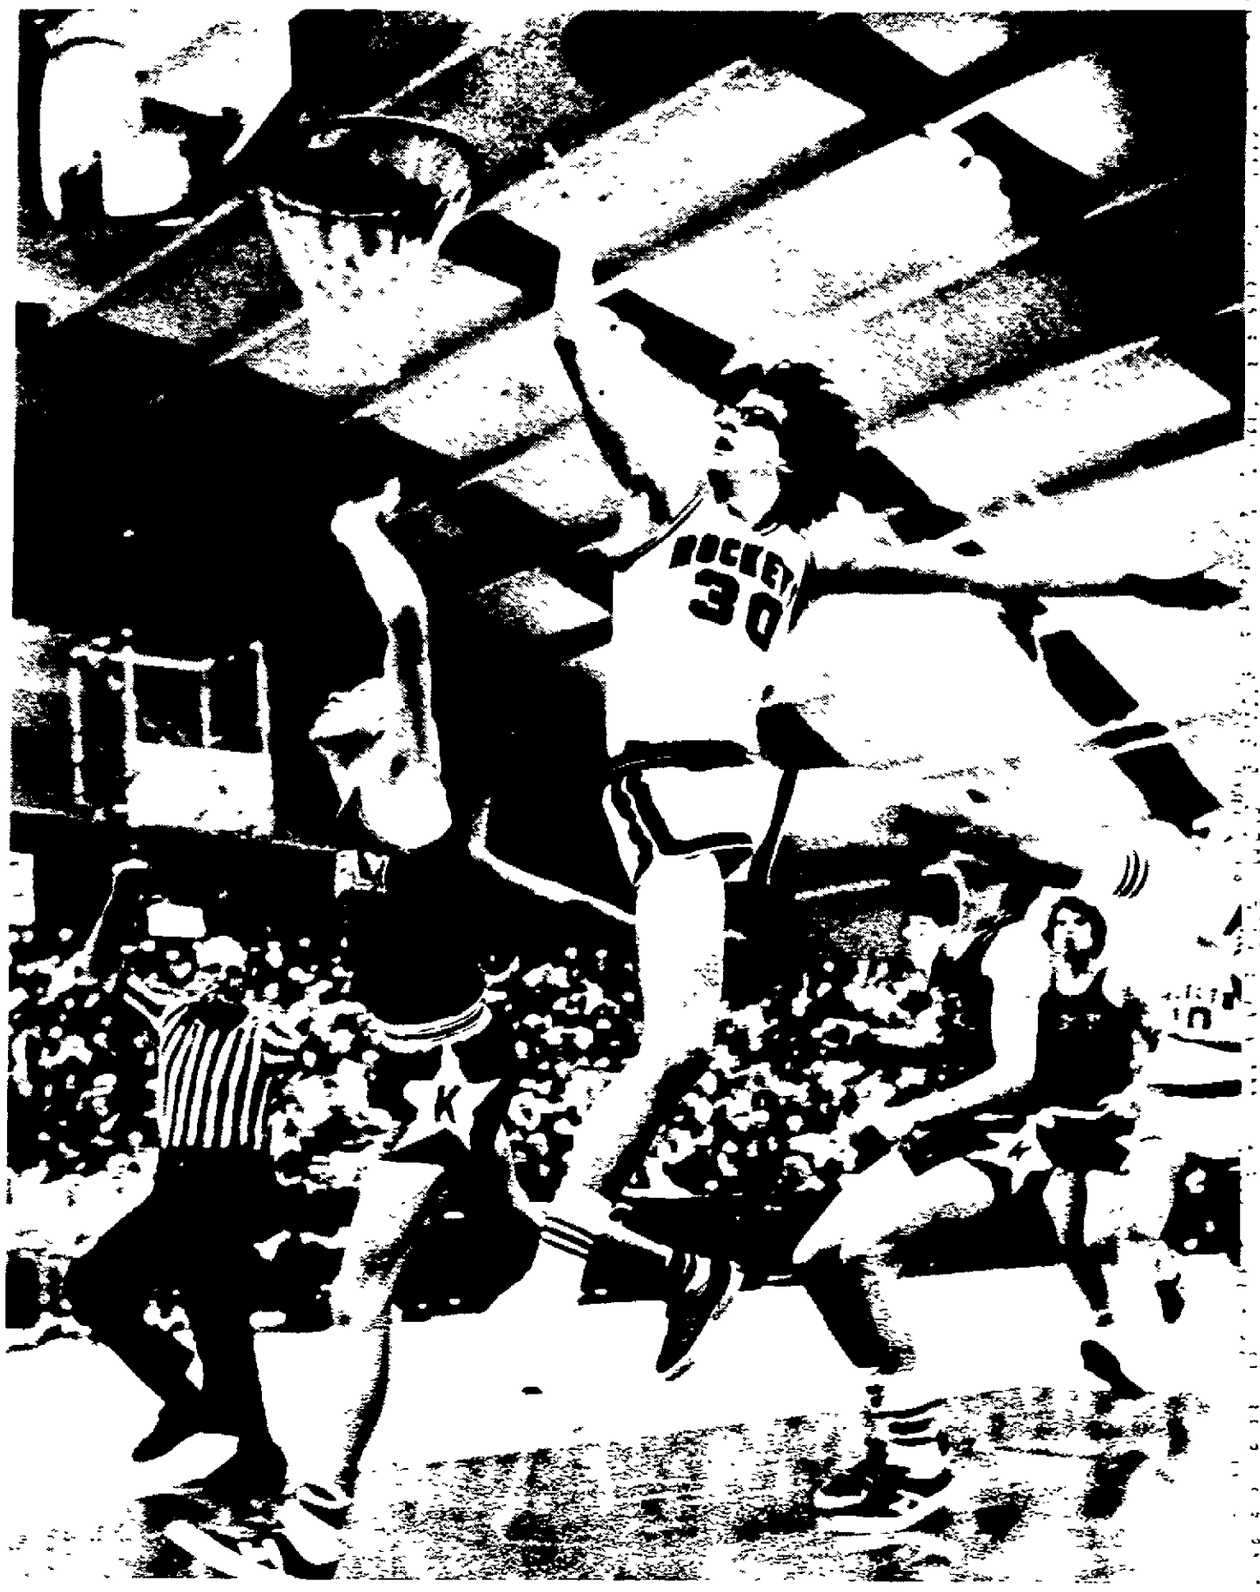

Vanden Boogaard was Kimberly's runnerup scorer with 14 points while Madsen and Volkmann led Neenah with 13 and 10, respectively.

Rebounding, one phase of the game pleasing to Einerson, saw the Rockets with a 32-25 edge. The losers wound up with 27 turnovers to the Kims' 18.

After first half miseries, the Rockets made all five of their third and fourth quarter free throw tries to finish with 10 of 17. From the floor, unofficially, it was Kimberly making 20 of 36; Neenah 17 of 45.

Doll doesn't deny report of firing

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) —Don Doll won't deny assertions by players that he was fired as Green Bay Packer defensive backfield coach, contrary to a club announcement that he had resigned for "personal reasons."

The Packers issued a four-sentence statement Thursday, but two unidentified Green Bay players insisted Friday that Doll had been fired Monday, apparently because of differences with Coach Dan Devine.

"That's a lie," a player said of the Packers' statement. "They fired him, simple as that. Is that what they told you? It's a lie."

"I heard about the firing two days ago," the other player said. "I was shocked. Why fire him? He did a super job. The impression I got was that he and Coach Devine didn't get along."

Both players, who asked not to be identified, commented to the Milwaukee Journal.

Doll, reached by The Associated Press at his Green Bay home, said, "I can say nothing other than what I said yesterday. You would have to get anything further from some other source."

Asked if he meant Devine, Doll said: "Yes. It would have to come from the Green Bay Packer office."

Devine flew to Houston on Friday to attend the Super Bowl.

"I said yesterday it was because of personal problems, and that is factual," Doll said. "I'm going to take care of that first."

Asked if he planned to leave Green Bay soon, he said: "No, I don't have any place to go. I just want to take care of this problem first."

He declined to elaborate.

Asked if he would deny having been fired, he said: "No."

Doll, one of the first assistants named by Devine after Devine became coach in 1971, developed a young secondary that surrendered only seven touchdown passes, fewest in the National Football League and nearly a league record, in 1972.

The secondary, weakened when star cornerback Willie Buchanon was lost for the season in the sixth game of 1973, gave up 14 touchdown passes this season.

But the team's pass defense still ranked fifth in the 13-team National Conference.

Strong Kohawks deal Vikings 98-68 setback

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia. — A hot-shooting Coe College basketball team handed Lawrence University a 98-68 setback in the first Midwest Conference game of the season for both clubs here Friday night.

The Kohawks dumped in 46 field goals to 26 for the Vikes.

In addition to starting conference competition with a victory, Coe boosted its season record to 6-2. The Kohawks are rated as one of the pre-season favorites in the loop.

Coe scored 54 points in the first half and was never headed. After a 10-10 tie in the early going, the winners reeled off a string of 10 straight points for a commanding 20-10 advantage and the outcome was never in doubt after that.

Garland Smith, Ed McFalls and Fran Rohlman led the Coe scoring with 60 points between them and 29 of the 46 field goals.

Smith led the scoring with 21 markers while McFalls had 20 and Rohlman added 19.

For the Vikes, who now have a 1-6 record for the campaign, Quincy Rogers was the leading scorer with 24 points on nine field goals and six free throws. Doug Fyfe had 15 and Jerry Percak added 14.

Patriots record win

OSHKOSH— Appleton East jumped off to a big first half lead, withstood a third period surge by Oshkosh North and then cruised to a 69-53 victory over the Spartans here Friday night.

The win boosted the Patriot's Fox Valley Association record to 3-4 while North dipped to a 1-6 loop mark.

North managed just eight points in each of the first two periods while the Patriots were building up a 33-16 halftime advantage. Early in the third period, the winners had boosted the margin to 41-19 before the Spartans caught fire and closed the gap considerably.

North rallied to within 12 points of the Patriots as Dave Hirte led the way with 10 points in the quarter.

East hit better than 50 per cent from the floor in the game with 30 out of 58. North had 23 field goals out of 57 tries.

In the rebounding department, East had a 26-22 edge.

East has been without the services of Dave Calloway since the 6-7 pivot man broke an ankle in practice and Friday night they also were missing Ray Schreiter who did not suit up for the contest.

Jeff West had 22 points for East on 11 field goals while Phil Plamann added 18.

Hirte had 20 points for the losers while Strasser was close behind with 19.

Xavier trips up Roncalli, 50-49

BY JOHN L. PAUSTIAN
Post-Crescent sports editor

The Xavier High School Hawks, who had a penchant for losing close basketball decisions (five of them by one to four points) in the last six weeks, Friday night found out how the other half lives. . .and thoroughly enjoyed it.

After the Hawks had upset Roncalli, 50-49, in a Fox Valley Christian Conference thriller, Coach Gus Laemmrich enthused: "This is a big win for us. We worked long and hard, and it has paid off. I never lost faith."

The Hawks, whose shooting in the first three periods had ranged from mediocre to poor, came up with some fabulous marksmanship when it counted most. Xavier missed only one shot of any kind–from the field or foul line–in the touch-and-go final quarter. The Hawks, who had made only 12 of 39 from the floor previously, were 4-for-5 in the last stanza. From the line, they had been 10-for-15, but they finished up with eight straight.

In addition to this kind of clutch shooting, the key factor was the Hawks' display of court savvy. "We started to think," noted Laemmrich, "and we were not just a bunch of robots." Hawk passing, in attacking Roncalli's zone defense, was virtually error-free in the final five minutes, and the only shots taken were of the high percentage variety.

But it was anybody's ball game down to the final 2 seconds when Rich Kewley's last two bulls-eyes (out of a prodigious 12-free throw night) locked it up for the hosts. The Jets carried a 36-34 lead into the final quarter, but Kewley, Tom Floodstrand and Bob Mullen lit up the scoreboard to put the Hawks ahead, 40-39, with 3:41 remaining. Sophomore Greg Cavanaugh swished in a corner shot to enable Roncalli to regain the lead. Floodstrand parted the cords, at 2:42, and Xavier was back in the lead. A pair of free throws by Larry Rand put the Jets ahead for the last time (43-42) with 2:06 to go.

Dick Boya hooped a 15-footer, at 1:55, and Xavier was ahead to stay. A costly Roncalli turnover 11 seconds later gave the ball back to Xavier, and, shortly thereafter, Kewley meshed two free throws. Rand brought it back to one point on a rebound goal with 49 seconds left. Twenty-six seconds later, Xavier's freeze strategy pulled all Jets from the vicinity of the basket, and Boya went under to score easily. Dave Hartman, though, cut it to 48-47, with 12 seconds left. Kewley's two perfect foul shots, at :02, assured the end of Xavier's overall losing streak of six games. Taking no chance on a final-second foul, Xavier gave the Jets a free ride for Rand's short goal at the buzzer.

It was the second straight 1-point loss for the Jets, who fell to a 4-4 FVCC record. The Hawks, who gave away considerable size to Roncalli, boosted their league record to 3-5 and their overall mark to 5-6.

Kewley led all scorers with 14 points, 12 of which came from 14 foul-line attempts. Mullen tallied 11. Rand was the only double-figure producer for the Jets, with 12 points.

The lead changed hands 11 times in the aggressively-played contest. The biggest Xavier lead was six, and the widest for Roncalli was four. The zone and pressing defenses employed by both teams were in command until the final quarter. Xavier's game-long floor shooting was 36.4 per cent (16 of 44), while Roncalli shot at a 40.4 per cent clip (19 or 47).

Ghosts outshoot Bluejays

BY ROGER PITT
Post-Crescent staff writer

MENASHA —High-scoring Kaukauna ran its current winning streak to six games and surpassed the 80-point mark for a fifth consecutive time Friday in outgunning Menasha 86-67 in a Fox Valley Association shootout here.

Kaukauna hiked its FVA record to 4-3 and moved its overall record to 8-3. Menasha suffered its seventh straight conference defeat and is 3-8 overall.

The Bluejays had a 29-28 advantage on field goals but the deadly Kaukauna marksmen converted 30 of 42 free throws for a healthy 21 point advantage.

Pacing the Kaukauna attack was senior guard Scott Lunda who sank 11 of 13 free throws and added 7 of 11 from the floor for 25 points.

Scoring honors for the night were captured by the hosts hot shooting Ron Bodmer who singed the nets for 28 points — many coming on followup shots and jumpers from about 10 feet out on the baseline.

The teams exchanged scoring bursts during the first half as Kaukauna led only 38-35 at the intermission.

Bodmer kept the Jays within two early in the third period with a field goal to make it 45-43 and two free throws to cut the lead to 47-45. Lunda scored off a fast break and Frank Bouressa added two from the charity line for a 51-45 Ghost lead.

Bodmer sandwiched two goals around Jerry Schumacher's goal and free throw as Kaukauna began to slowly widen the advantage late in the third period. A pair of free throws by Reed Giordana after the buzzer made it 60-50 going into the last period. The early going in the final stanza was about a 2-for-1 exchange as the Ghosts mounted a 73-58 lead. Bodmer cut that with a pair of quick baskets, but Kaukauna ran nine unanswered points to ice the contest.

Kaukauna's first-year basketball coach Ken Roloff said, "I thought we rebounded very well. They're a scrappy team and we used our physical strength to advantage. We also blocked a lot of shots."

Schumacher, who transfered to Kaukauna after St. John High School closed, turned in a strong effort while Bouressa rode the bench with four fouls late in the third and early in the fourth quarters.

"He (Schumacher) is more at ease at center," Roloff said of his starting forward. "But, Frank is very strong in the middle and we feel they make a good pair in the lineup at the same time."

The Ghosts crashed the boards for 47 rebounds, while Menasha pulled in only 29. The Bluejays held an advantage in turnovers forcing the Ghosts into 28 errors, while making just 14 themselves. The Jays converted 29 of 82 shots, while Kaukauna was shooting 28 of 53 — including seven of eight in the final period when it sank 10 free throws.

Terrors turn back pesky Indians

BY DAN VANDERPAS
Post-Crescent staff writer

Appleton West's Terrors saw an early second quarter 20-point (26-6) lead dwindle late in the game before emerging with a 61-57 win over Oshkosh West in Fox Valley Association action in Seims Gym Friday night.

The victory enabled the Terrors (4-3) to conclude the first half of their league season tied for third place with the Indians and Kaukauna.

Appleton West still held a commanding 14-point (50-36) advantage after three periods. But the departure of 6-4 senior jumpingjack Mike Brouillard with 3:18 left in the quarter contributed to the late Indian uprising.

"We needed this one," a smiling AW Coach Dick Emanuel said after it was over. "We ran into foul trouble, but the boys held on and that's a sign of a good young team.

"I'm proud of our defense. Also, we handled the ball well in tight situations."

The veteran Terror coach singled out 6-1 junior Dave Thiel for his fine passing and ball handling.

He added, "We beat a darn good ball club tonight. A win like this should give our young team confidence."

Thiel connected for three baskets in the first quarter and those six points matched the combined output of the OW quintet.

Indian Coach Don Erickson was predictably disappointed with his charges' first period performance.

"We should have stayed in the (bleep) locker room during that first quarter," he noted "We forced our passes and didn't move to the basket. We'd throw the ball and there'd be nobody around to catch it. In addition, we gave them some easy baskets."

Erickson, whose team was 7-0 overall before spinning into a four-game losing streak, was duly impressed with Brouillard's rebounding ability. "Hey, that kid can really jump," he said.

The Indians, with the help of Bruce Dittmer's basket and free throw, scored the first seven points in the final quarter to slice AW's advantage to 50-43. But at the 4:11 juncture, Greg Reitzner ended the Terror drought with a jumper from the circle.

During the ensuing 3:40 however, Steve Dittmer netted seven points, including a layup following a steal with 1:25 left, putting the Indians to within three at 56-53.

The remainder of the contest saw Thiel and 5-11 senior Tom Emmers hit two free throws apiece to ice the verdict.

Appleton West was devastating from the charity stripe, converting 13 in 16 tries. Reitzner led the way with five in as many tries, while Thiel was two-for-two and Emmers connected on five of six.

Brouillard and 6-2 forward Arnie Fielkow enabled AW to hold a rebound edge despite the presence of OW's 6-7 center, Bill Dehn.

High scorers for the Terrors were Thiel and Reitzner with 14 apiece. Six of the seven AW players, who saw action, scored at least six points.

For the Indians, Steve Dittmer hit 17, Dehn tallied 14 and Bruce Dittmer contributed 13. Bruce was the league's second leading scorer going in with a 16.7 average.

Bucks nip Bullets

MILWAUKEE (AP) —The last thing the battered Milwaukee Bucks needed Friday night was an overtime game, but they aren't quibbling with the results.

Lucius Allen, one of three Milwaukee regulars who did not start because of injury, produced the winning points with a jump shot from the key with 52 seconds left in the extra session as the Bucks nipped the Capital Bullets 115-113.

"We had an 18-5 lead at the beginning and blew it. We've got a long way to go to get back in shape," said Coach Larry Costello, whose Bucks play the Chicago Bulls, their closest pursuers in the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division, at Chicago tonight and here Sunday night.

Phil Chenier, who scored 31 points, converted a three-point play to pull the Bullets into a 113-113 tie with 1:09 left in overtime before Allen hit his decisive jumper.

The Bullets had another chance when Milwaukee's Curtis Perry lost the ball with 23 seconds left. But Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who led all scorers with 34 points, stole a Capital pass with 12 seconds to go and Allen dribbled away the remaining time.

"We have nothing to be ashamed of. We beat them by two points Sunday and lost by two tonight," said Capital's Elvin Hayes, who sank an uncontested 20 foot jump shot to force a 106-106 tie as the buzzer ended regulation play.

Milwaukee led by 11 points with 4:45 to play in regulation, but five points and two big rebounds by Hayes led the Bullets' comeback.

Allen had a chance to insure a victory in regulation when he went to the foul line with two seconds left and Milwaukee leading 105-104. He sank the first free throw but missed the second, and Capital called time out with one second left after grabbing the rebound.

Manny Leaks passed inbounds at center court to Hayes, whose jumper from the right of the lane bounced high off the rim twice and once against the glass before dropping through the nets.

"I thought they would go to Chenier for the last shot because he's a better shooter and that maybe Hayes would set a pick for him," Costello said. "I bet it wasn't the play they were trying to work."

Costello said Abdul-Jabbar should have contested Hayes, and the big center accepted the blame.

"The only matchup we had was one guy on the ball as they took the ball out of bounds," Abdul-Jabbar said. "You can play a zone until the ball comes in."

"I was out of position," he said. "I was playing a zone in from the basket. We just didn't get the ball, and that was my fault."

Perry, who supported Abdul-Jabbar with 23 points and 17 rebounds, said the Bullets clogged the middle as they linec up for Leaks' inbounds pass.

"They caught us moving into one another and that left Elvin open," Perry said. "Elvin just kind of drifted over to the side. We figured Chenier would shoot it. I was on Leaks, but I was kind of shading the area where Chenier was."

Perry said the Bucks should not have allowed the Bullets to catch them in regulation time.

"When you have to play that long with everybody hurting and tired, that's how you get more injuries," he said. "But we'll be ready for those two with Chicago. Most definitely!"

Lourdes downs Springs quintet

OSHKOSH — Sparked by a second quarter surge and nine for 12 shooting from the floor in the third quarter, Oshkosh Lourdes held off a determined five from St. Mary Springs to win 65-59 Friday night.

Statistically, the game was a remarkably even contest — Springs firing 49 per cent from the field and Lourdes 53 per cent, both teams hitting on 11 free throws, and Lourdes committing two more fouls than the Ledgers, 17-15.

Simply put, the Knights individual play was a bit better. Sophomore Mike Muza led the charge in the second quarter, finishing the first half with 13 tallies. Ken Korsh and Jim Baerwald added their efforts in the second half, Korsh scoring 12 in the third period and Baerwald running his season free throw percentage to 92 per cent, 33 for 36. Mike Tiofolo and Dave Buchel finished with 17 and 16 points respectively for Springs, but it wasn't enough to stop the Knights.

Lourdes' victory upped their Fox Valley Christian record to 5-3, while Springs dropped from a tie for third with the Knights to 4-4.

COLD WEATHER like that of the past few weeks puts a terrific strain on your car, says Dan Luebke Citgo Service station at the intersection of County Trunk P and Midway Rd., between Appleton and Menasha. Therefore it might be wise to do something nice for your car like having a mid-winter check up for battery, hoses and radiator to make sure it will start for you on the remaining cold mornings ahead in February and March. Dan Luebke has been in the business of fixing ailing and balky cars since 1939, and he and his crew provide knowledgeable, super-courteous service to keep your winter straining car on the road. (Adv.)

Winter has been here —no doubt about it —and it is a wise motorist who takes his car in for a mid-winter check to see that it will keep on functioning well for him in the remaining cold days ahead. Start failures on cold mornings can be costly in both time and money.

Dan Luebke is an expert mechanic who specializes in transmissions. So, if your car needs this type of care, be sure to call on him at his Citgo Service Station, at the corner of County Trunk P and Midway Road, between Appleton & Menasha.

Since 1939

Dan's skill in diagnosing car troubles and correcting them dates back to 1939 and he has kept pace with the demands of the ever-more-complex automobiles. His trained staff is ready to do practically every type of engine repair your car needs. His centrally-located station, extremely easy to get in and out of, makes his services readily available.

Winter's mean and it is time to keep your car in best running condition. Even with little driving during the winter months, your car's engine should be checked for points, timing, spark plugs, leaks and brakes. It's time for that oil change and lubrication job, too. At Dan's you are sure to have all trouble spots carefully inspected.

Other services

Luebke's specializes in auto air conditioning service and installation also.

For added convenience, Dan has pick-up and delivery service for all his busy customers. Just phone 722-2947.

While Dan is always prepared to give lightning-quick service, he does appreciate reservations for those repair jobs that require more time. (Adv.)

Ann Landers

No child can replace another

Dear Ann Landers: I cannot recall having read a letter in your column concerning the loss of a child. I hope you will print this one because we have just gone through it.

People mean well, but they do say some incredibly thoughtless and stupid things. For example, "Thank heavens it wasn't your husband. You'll get over this soon and live as you did before. Your life won't be very different." Or, "Children grow up and leave you eventually. Don't be too unhappy."

This next bit of philosophy we heard from three people: "The way so many teen-agers are turning out today, perhaps you were spared something worse."

The "consoling words" we heard most frequently were these: "You are young yet. You'll have another child to take this one's place."

Don't people know that no matter how many children there are, no child can ever take the place of another?

Please, Ann, help educate your millions of readers to these facts. So many well-meaning friends need to be told.—Bereaved Parents

Dear Parents: It's too bad that well-intentioned people feel the need to say something. Actually, their presence speaks for them. Simple silence, and a touch of the hand, says it all.

Dear Ann Landers: I was intrigued by "Grandma's" fail-safe cure for snoring. She said she taped her mouth shut with clear plastic tape which she brought home from the hospital after surgery. It was probably that expensive, non-allergenic tape she was talking about. I hope she purchased it, Ann, but my hunch is that she "helped herself."

All America bemoans the rising cost of hospital care. As an employe for the past 15 years I can tell you that bandages, swabs, dishes, utensils, pillows, linen, bathmats—just about everything you see in a hospital room—even religious pictures and crucifixes—disappear with astonishing frequency. Hospital equipment is usually the best money can buy, purchased for quality and durability. Replacement is extremely costly.

Each hospital bed accommodates approximately 50 patients annually. Let us assume there are 200 beds in the hospital. If every patient helps himself to one roll of adhesive tape, that's 10,000 rolls a year.

Please, Ann, tell people who decry the high cost of living that it wouldn't be so high if Mr. and Mrs. America (and their children) didn't help themselves to things so freely.—A Fighting Member Of America's Health Team

Dear Member: What people don't seem to understand is that all types of lifting, whether it's from the hospital, the supermarket or a public building, costs them something in terms of higher prices. Rising costs are always passed on to the consumer. And that's you and me, Bub. (Copyright 1973)

Right to lead often can be a sore burden

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The right to lead, normally a precious privilege, can be a sore burden. To avoid being stuck with the lead you may have to get rid of high cards and save low cards in their place.

Opening lead — ♡ 4

West opens the four of hearts, and East wins with the king. East returns the eight of hearts, and South plays the ten.

West must refuse this trick by playing a low heart. If West wins the second trick, he can get one other heart trick but no more. The defenders will get only three hearts and one club.

West knows the situation because East is supposed to return his highest heart. if the eight is East's highest heart, South must have Q-10-9.

So far so good, but there is more to the defense than just unmasking South's deceptive play. The next heart lead must come from East, through South's queen.

DEVELOPS CLUBS

Declarer leads a diamond to dummy and returns a low club. If East plays the three, South will gladly play low, allowing West to win the trick. Later South will cash the ace and king of clubs to establish the rest of the suit.

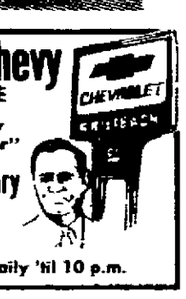

East foils this plot by playing the nine on the first round of clubs. South must play the ace to keep East out, and now West must drop the queen of clubs. This enables East to win a trick later with the jack of clubs; and a heart lead by East then defeats the contract.

If West foolishly keeps the queen of clubs, he will be allowed to win a trick with it on the second round of clubs. The wrong defender will have the lead, and South will make his contract.

Police & fire beat

Engine wiring was damaged after a fire in a van truck in the 100 block of S. Walter Avenue about 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Firemen said plastic hose melted, causing gasoline to spray over the heated engine and ignite. The vehicle, owned by Michael A. Heesakker, 521 1/2 N. Center St., had to be towed away.

Three persons were injured in a car-train accident on the Chicago & North Western tracks along the 200 block of S. Badger Avenue about 2:45 p.m. Wednesday.

Released from St. Elizabeth Hospital were the driver of the car, William S. Carlson, 19, and a passenger, Angela M. Green, 18, both of 1823 S. Bouten St. He sustained head, arm and leg cuts, while she received head and leg cuts and leg bruises.

Another passenger, Susan M. Reddy, 18, 1509 W. Franklin St., was admitted to the hospital and treated for a head bump and back injuries.

Police said Carlson was driving north on Badger and attempted to stop at the railroad crossing. His auto slid onto the tracks and stalled.

The train, engineered by Normal Mortensen, Fond du Lac, was moving northeast and struck the left rear door of the car, pushing it off the pavement and into a tree on the property of Sauter, Seaborne, Paynter & Duszak Architects, 825 W. Lawrence St.

Two persons complained of sore necks after a two-car accident at Pershing and Meade streets about 3:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Injured were one driver, Patricia A. Londo, 19, and a passenger, Denis A. Hinkens, 21, both of 1500 E. Longview Drive.

Police said the Londo auto was stopped at a stop sign in the westbound lane of Pershing when it was struck from the rear by the second auto, driven by Kenneth B. Fickel, 22, 2103 N. McDonald St.

HORTONVILLE—Two machines were damaged and six bottles of liquor were reported missing after an apparent break-in late Tuesday at Mac's Landing, route 1. The proprietor, E.W. McKeever, said he could find no signs of forced entry into the building. He said the damaged machines were a juke box and a football machine.

Cash totaling $87 was reported missing after a break-in this week at Country Estates, route 5, Appleton. The manager, Ralph Osterberg, told police that entry was gained by prying open an office door.

Wanda Philipsen, 1303 W. Prospect Ave., told Appleton police that her purse, containing $26, was stolen while she was at a dance at Appleton High School-West Friday night.

Social Security office sends out new gold check

Some residents of the Appleton Social Security office service area received a different type of check shortly after the first of the year.

According to Frank M. Donnick, district manager of the office, the new checks took two forms; one, a new gold colored check and the other, the familiar green federal check with several names added on the face of the check.

The gold and the special green check represented the first payments made by the federal government under the new Supplemental Security Income program which began Jan. 1.

"The reason for the gold colored check is simply to give us some quick way of knowing which payment a person is talking about when they contact our office," said Donnick. The other green checks will be issued on an as-needed basis to certain newly eligible applicants where there is an immediate and emergency need for funds.

The new program provides payments to the aged, blind and disabled individuals up to $216, or up to $309 for eligible couples.

Phone network classes slated by Extension

Sixteen courses in engineering, mathematics and applied science are being offered by the University of Wisconsin -Extension beginning Jan. 14 in Oshkosh and Menasha.

Six semester-long credit courses will be available on engineering mathematics, electrical engineering, pollution control practices, technical writing, engineering thermodynamics and products liability.

Courses offered for continuing education credit are basic economics for engineers, public works management, finance and accounting for engineering managers, project management, structural engineering, soil dynamics and machine foundations, solving problems related to occupational safety and health, and reviews of vector and multivariable calculus.

The principals of transactional analysis made popular in the best selling book "I'm OK, You're OK" will be examined in a special course beginning on March 21 on transactional analysis for engineers.

All 16 courses offered through the statewide Extension education network program and UWE's Department of Engineering are available through the use of a phone hookup to Menasha and Oshkosh.

Enrollment fees range from $20 to $90. Further program information and registration materials are available from Eugene Gibas, local program director at the UW Center-Fox Valley.

Cold, snowy

More frigid, snow-filled days are ahead for Wisconsin, according to this 30-day outlook prepared by the National Weather Service. The map shows below normal temperatures and above normal amounts of precipitation for the state for the next month. (AP wirephoto map)

Only 5 below tonight!

A bit of the warmth of human kindness has crept into the weatherman's cold heart — he has predicted a low of only five degrees below zero for tonight. And a high near 20 for Sunday.

Skies will be clear tonight. Increasing cloudiness on Sunday could just bring a little light snow, the National Weather Service in Green Bay has predicted.

Winds will be southerly at 8-18 miles per hour tonight and Sunday.

Monday will be even warmer, with a high in the upper 20s. And a chance of snow.

Observations by Wisconsin Michigan Power Co. at 8 a.m. today for the preceding 24 hours showed a high Friday of 16 and a low of 13 below.

The barometer was at 30.30 and rising and the relative humidity was 54 per cent. The dew point was at 18 degrees below zero and winds were west northwest at 10 m.p.h. There had been no precipitation.

Sunset today at 5:36 p.m. Sunrise tomorrow at 8:27 a.m. Moonrise tonight at 11:17 p.m.

Prominent Stars; Sirius in the southeast at 9:09 p.m. Beteigeuse high in south at moonrise.

Year of conservation, expansion for UWGB

GREEN BAY — The year 1973 was one of pushing out dimensions and pulling in belts for the University of Wisconsin — Green Bay.

The belts — from an energy conservation standpoint — began tightening as early as Jan. 26, when UWGB lowered building temperatures from 72 degrees to 68 degrees. Another big tug at the power fat came in December when emergency energy crisis policies were broadened to include reduced lighting, lower motor pool speeds and even further reductions in temperatures during evenings and on weekends.

The stretching of boundaries ranged from the physical campus to the academic philosophy.

UWGB grew outward in December with the gift from Inland Steel Corporation of two acres of land near the Bay Apartments and grew upward in September with occupancy of the three buildings of the College of Creative Communication complex.

At the same time, the Deckner Building, long the home of UW in Green Bay, was vacated by all UWGB units except the physical education staff.

The foundation for another expansion capped the year in late December when the State Building Commission gave its approval for a physical education facility for the campus.

The university's ability to respond to innovative suggestions from faculty, staff and students was given a dramatic boost in July when a $180,000 grant was announced. The award, part of the Venture Fund program of the Ford Foundation, was earmarked to provide "research and development" seed money for special educational activities not anticipated in the regular budget.

In August, the campus received word from Madison of a central administration recommendation that UWGB be designated one of two "special mission" institutions in the UW system and be considered for master's degree and specialist level work appropriate to its mission.

With the fall semester, the new University Without Walls (UWW) had added another dimension to UWGB. The innovative program, established through a $15,000 grant from the Union for Experimenting Colleges and Universities, currently involves more than 20 students in degree-district work, tailor-made by each student and a committee of advisers.

UWW allows students to pursue a variety of learning experiences outside the traditional classroom, to prescribe their own curriculum and to graduate when they have accomplished learning objectives agreed upon with the advisors.

Auditors and UWW students joined a growing and changing student body at UWGB during 1973. Most dramatic in its change has been the number of transfer students on campus. Increases of from 50 to 65 per cent were the year-long phenomenon, with each semester producing greater numbers than the corresponding semester of 1972.

While many institutions across the nation experienced falling enrollments, UWGB maintained an increase each semester of the year. Enrollment was more than 3,500 for the spring semester, 1,300 for summer and 3,600 for fall.

The conference fare on campus ranged from a seminar sponsored by UWGB and the environmental research advisory committee of the American Foundrymen's Society in January to the national conference in June on religious and ethical perspectives.

While faculty and staff involved themselves in far-reaching work and won recognition for their contributions, students were also making 1973 a year of note.

One of the most significant happenings had its start in May, when UWGB was invited to send the only collegiate band from the United States to be "band in residence" for the eight-week summer session at the Institute for Advanced Musical Studies in Crans, Switzerland. The experience for some 100 band members, directors and chaperones included studies at the institute, concerts throughout Switzerland, a special 1,500-mile concert tour through Romania and sight-seeing excursions in other neighboring countries.

Outagamie County police said the truck hit an embankment and continued into a farm field. Behm was eastbound and apparently fell asleep at the wheel, police said.

Oil crisis could lead to nationalization, Kastenmeier says

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Rep. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wis., commenting on a letter from Madison Mayor Paul Soglin, Thursday said Congress may have to consider at least a partial nationalization of the petroleum industry during the energy crisis. Kastenmeier said such action is "no longer unthinkable," and said nationalization may be necessary unless the industry begins strict self-controlling policies to keep oil producers from taking advantage of the energy crisis.

Soglin, in a letter to Wisconsin's congressional delegation, said public ownership is the only sure means of guaranteeing the public that everything possible is being done to offset the nation's energy dilemma.

Debate ends on missions of 15 UW schools

Post-Crescent Madison bureau

MADISON — The University of Wisconsin Board of Regents ended five months of statewide debate Friday by approving revised mission statements for the 15 institutions of the University of Wisconsin System.

The decision means that UW-Green Bay and UW-Stout will become designated special mission campuses while UW-Oshkosh and UW-Eau Claire will be developed as regional graduate centers.

The mission statements were changed only slightly from the preliminary draft that was circulated prior to the 26 statewide public hearings that began in November. Most of the other campuses were appeased with specialized programs of their own and almost all campuses were left with their coveted teacher education programs.

The final drafts were approved unanimously despite strong disagreement from the Association of University of Wisconsin Faculty (TAUWF), which asked for a one month's delay on the adoption. TAUWF President Charles Kenney said the designation of Green Bay and Stout as special campuses gave them special status that was unfair to the other campuses.

Kenny called the recent hearings "window-dressing" and suggested that issuance of the final drafts during the holidays was a purposeful attempt to avoid faculty and campus discussion.

But Kenny's arguments were diluted by several regents who said they had changed their minds since September and lent full support to the new missions. Regent John Lavine of Chippewa Falls repudiated Kenney's objections and said he was angry that there would even be a suggestion that the hearings were window-dressing.

Regent Mary Williams said she did not feel that Green Bay and Stout were being given special status but admitted that the schools did have special missions that were altogether different from the other campuses. A Stevens Point resident, she had been one of the strongest opponents to the special mission assignment in September.

The new missions are part of an attempt by the regents to follow the mandate of the system merger by cutting some of the little-used programs and eliminating duplication in the system.

Green Bay will remain primarily associated with the theme of man and his environment and develop undergraduate and graduate programs to that subject. Stout will be concerned with professional careers in industry, technology, home economics and vocational rehabilitation.

The assignment of Oshkosh and Eau Claire as regional graduate centers has kicked up more of a fuss. The original suggestion by Central Administration seemed to imply that all other campuses, except Madison and Milwaukee, would lose their graduate programs.

But the issue has subsided with the later announcement that many graduate programs would remain at the other campuses and the voluntary formation of consortiums among the campuses.

Eau Claire, River Falls, La Crosse, Stout and Superior have formed the West Central Wisconsin Consortium (WCWC) to determine how the graduate programs at the campuses can best be merged.

Donald Smith, vice president for Academic Affairs, said officials of Oshkosh, Green Bay and Stevens Point would meet soon to devise strategy for best utilizing Oshkosh as a regional graduate center. He said the findings of WCWC may also help at Oshkosh.

Several regents said they were supporting the statements with the understanding that they can always be changed. Regent John Dixon of Appleton warned that the statements "are not written in granite."

Still, Regent James Solberg of Menomonie emphasized that it was the responsibility of the Board to take positive action in making merger workable and he said the action should be considered a maximum move, not a minimum move.

Legion Post donated funds to Wittenberg team

WITTENBERG — Members of the Bloecher-Johnson American Legion post agreed to a $100 donation to the village's Badger Amateur Basketball Association team at their Tuesday evening meeting. Guy Murdock represented the BABA at the meeting.

Alan Anderson, public schools guidance counselor on behalf of the Associetion For Retarded Children, stated the need for a meeting place. The Association has been meeting at the high school, but due to the energy shortage the school is following through with the policy of turning down thermostats at 3:15 p.m. As a result, it would prove costly to heat a meeting room after school hours because the building is heated in "blocks of rooms." The Legion voted to rent the hall to the ARC on an annual basis. The ARC will be charged the same as the other local non-profit organizations, just enough to cover cost.

Thomas Leslie, who represented the post at the Legion Oratorical Contest gave his speech, "What Is Equality?" to legionnaire and auxiliary members. He was presented with a $25 Savings Bond.

Announcement was made that the 8th Dist. Legion Oratorical Contest is to be held at the Wittenberg-Birnamwood High School Auditorium Jan. 20 at 1 p.m. Warner Kreitzer Jr. is in charge of arrangements.

Down, but not out

Today didn't go according to plan for 14-year-old Lori Vande Wettering, 1919 E. Frances St., Appleton. Her hope was to have attended the second session of The Post-Crescent's ski school this morning near New London. But an accident — a broken leg — at the first outing last Saturday changed all that. So ski school director Charles Torinus tried to brighten her spirits by presenting some gifts and the official school patch, which signifies her attendance — brief though it was — at the annual event. "I'm doing fine," said Lori, adding that she plans to be skiing again as soon as possible. It was the first such incident in many years at the ski school, Torinus noted. (Post-Crescent photo)

York less pessimistic

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wisconsin may be getting wiser about the whereabouts of its fuel, but the energy crisis is apparently becoming more distressing for nonsmokers and more inconvenient for snowbound motorists.

The latest rounds of bureaucratic commentary emanating from the state capital concerning the energy situation contain at least one optimistic note from Wisconsin's emergency energy coordinator, Stanley York.

He said Friday his frustrations over a lack of data about fuel sales, supplies and anticipated consumption are beginning to abate.

York said he is establishing a Feb. 1 deadline for more than 1,000 companies to supply his staff with reliable information on fuel oil.

He had said he was powerless to wrest necessary data from petroleum corporations. So the legislature gave him authority last month to go to court if suppliers continue to be stubborn.

York said he had been handicapped when trying to reply to complaints and inquiries from service stations, businesses and their customers.

York, a former Republican party executive, said he is confident the Nixon administration will soon provide adequate guidelines on fuel allocations for the states.

"There has been no mandatory gasoline program, and that has left us frustrated," he said.

"I am not awfully critical of the feds at this point," he said. "It has taken them time to put the pieces together, and now they are coming up with a good program."

In Washington, meanwhile, Nixon's energy director announced a four-day delay until Tuesday in the allocation guidelines, depriving distributors and customers of even a brief advance period in which to get adjusted to the administration's plan.

If York feels less frustration, the state health officer is feeling more concern about citizens' lungs while the State Highway Commission is issuing orders about less maintenance on snow-coated roads.

Dr. George Handy said a fuel-saving modification in the state's minimum requirements for pumping air into places of public accommodation could lead to stale air in heavily traveled buildings unless occupants show good sense.

Without the customary flow of fresh air through ventilation systems, he said, tobacco smoke may accumulate in quantities hazardous to persons with allergies and pulmonary conditions.

"I would ask smokers to recognize their obligations to those around them and to show consideration," he said.

To lessen the demand for furance heat, the required amount of intake of winter air for public buildings has been reduced, at least until May 5.

Highway officials said about 11,000 miles of rural roads are going to get less attention from snowplows, a reflection of potential fuel shortages.

Road commissioners ordered reductions in winter maintenance of pavement carrying fewer than 5,000 vehicles daily. For 1,400 miles of paving carrying more than 5,000, maintenance is to continue as usual.

Gerhard T. Landness, state maintenance engineer, said plowing and salting will be curtailed on the less-used roads between 8 p.m. and 4 p.m., and all day Sundays.

Two workshops set to explain father-son pact

WAUPACA — A Father and Son Agreement workshop, designed to cover the basic problems and formats for setting up father-son agreements in agriculture, will be held Wednesday and Thursday from 10:30 a. m. to 3 p. m.

The Wednesday session will be held in the basement of the Shawano County courthouse and the Thursday workshop at Cedar Springs Resort, Manawa.

Participants in the workshop will be Joe L. Walker, Waupaca County agricultural agent; Norman Sawyer, Shawano County agent; George Frye and Don Hohman, instructors from the Appleton Vocational, Technical and Adult Education office, and Prof. Richard Weigle of the agricultural economics department, University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Sponsors of the workshops are the Shawano and Waupaca county offices of University Extension and the Appleton Vocational Institute.

Interested persons should register with either of the UW Extension offices.

Police & fire beat

NEW LONDON — A 13-year-old city girl sustained a cut on the right side of her head when she was struck by a car at 7:30 a.m. Wednesday in the 300 block of S. Shawano Street.

Susan Herter, 312 Wisconsin St., was taken to New London Community Hospital by ambulance. She apparently crossed the street in front of a southbound auto driven by Arthur Blank, 22, 316 Wisconsin St.

Auto deaths drop in Waupaca

WAUPACA — The law enforcement committee of the Waupaca County Board learned this week that traffic fatalities during 1973 were cut to five from a total of 19 last year, that traffic accidents increased by 35 and that investigators from the sheriff's department spent most of their time in December investigating buglaries in the Towns of Dayton and Farmington.

The reduction in traffic fatalities was good news for committee members as comparable figures for the years 1970 through 1972 showed 19 deaths each year on county highways.

Capt. John Penney reportedthatduring December the eight traffic officers had filed reports on 83 accidents involving 122 vehicles and 27 personal injuries. Officers made 61 traffic arressts, four criminal arrests and issued 126 warnings.

They made 18 blood runs, 11 funeral escorts, 15 prisoner transports and assisted 124 motorists in difficulty. They also responded to 312 radio calls, 23 telephone calls and assisted the sheriff on 60 calls and county municipalities on 45 calls.

The squad car mileage for the month was 21,977.

Investigators handled 16 burglaries, 11 of them in Dayton and Farmington where the Chain O' Lakes is located. During 1973 there were 47 break-ins in the area, 11 in the early part of December.

Chief Deputy Robert Andraschko and George Myer, investigator, reported that two men had been arrested and charged with several of the burglaries.

The law enforcement committee, officers of the traffic department and sheriff's department, town constables, the conservation warden and the security officer at the Grand Army Home have been invited to meet with area residents, the two town boards and officers of the Chain O' Lakes Property Owners Association to develop a plan for tightened security in the area.

The meeting will be held at the Grand Army Home at 2 p. m. Jan. 26.

Sheriff Loran Frazier reported that 42 adult prisoners and eight juveniles were held in the county jail for a total of 355 days during December. Board bill for the month was $994' and prisoners eaqed $476 under the Huber Law.

Farm prices keep pace with increasing costs

Milk and grain prices caused a climb but all meat animals except lamb were down in price from a year earlier, said the report.

Dairymen in the state are expected to receive an all time record of $8.46 per hundredweight for all milk of average test delivered during December, according to the report. The price is 22 cents more than November and $2.47 per hundredweight more than a year ago.

The price of corn averaged $2.43 per bushel during mid-December to increase 30 cents from a month earlier. It was a $1.13 gain from last year. Oats brought $1.34 per bushel for a 14 cent gain which boosted the price 48 cents above last year's level.

During December soybean prices increased to $5.58 per bushel. A year ago the soybean price was $3.70 per bushel. Barley also increased 19 cents from November in price to $1.97 per bushel. Alfalfa hay sold for $30.50 per ton which was $2.50 less than a year ago.

Added wheat imports part of plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The proposal made by the Nixon administration to eliminate existing import quotas on wheat, a move critics say would tend to depress U.S. farm prices, actually was suggested 18 months ago by a team of Agriculture Department experts.

The recommendation was part of an over-all plan aimed at liberalizing world agricultural trade. The report had been requested by Peter M. Flanigan, a White House trade adviser.

Although initially kept under wraps, the so-called Flanigan Report concentrated heavily on ideas for reducing tariffs and other trade barriers, including recommendations for easing many of the traditional U.S. restrictions on agricultural imports.

The plan assumes, the report said, that U.S farm programs would be gradually keyed to putting more land back into production and thus make wheat, feed grains and soybeans a mainstay of future exports.

"It also assumes that our import restrictions on wheat and dairy products, our import duties on wheat, oilseeds and meals, feed grains and livestock products will be removed gradually over a period of time," the report said.

President Nixon announced last Nov. 1 that he had asked the U.S. Tariff Commission to study the feasibility of removing wheat import quotas. A hearing currently is under way and the commission expects to have a recommendation for the White House by Feb. 15.

The move recently has been seen as a partial answer to the severe export drain on U.S. wheat supplies and not, apparently as another move simply to liberalize trade.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carroll G. Brunthaver, in fact, said Thursday the no-quota proposal was aimed at making Canadian wheat available during times of temporary shortages in the United States.

Brunthaver added, however, that wheat and flour import duties would remain in effect — for now at least — if the proposal to scrap quotas is adopted. Those duties, including a levy of 21 cents per bushel on imported wheat, would serve as a hedge against foreign grain undercutting the U.S. market.

The import quotas currently, as they have for more than 30 years, allow about 800,000 bushels of foreign wheat — nearly all from Canada — to enter the U.S. market annually. Another four million pounds of flour also is permitted.

Those are insignificant when compared with the 1.2 billion bushels of wheat expected to be sold abroad this season by U.S. exporters. But with a removal of restrictions, some groups fear Canadian wheat would glut the U.S. market whenever the world price situation normalizes.

Brunthaver said that in the absence of quotas, emergency action could be undertaken quickly to reimpose them if it appeared foreign wheat was endangering U.S. markets.

Tigerton gets funds from state, federal tax-sharing programs

TIGERTON — The village has received a federal revenue sharing check for $2,519. It will be placed in a certificate of deposit until it is decided where it will be most needed.

A state shared tax check for about $16,746 also was received and will be used for the general expenses of the village.

There may be new lights at the athletic field, if tests prove favorable. The lighting project was assumed by the Tigerton Advancement Association and it asked civic organizations and village board for support. The village board Jan. 7 passed a resolution to borrow the amount needed.

Missionary work awaits young couple in Tanzania

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bolstad, who have been making their home in Appleton for the past year, will leave the community Monday for the mission fields in Tanzania, East Africa.

Mrs. Bolstad is the former Shirley Roehl, daughter of Mrs. Alvin Roehl, 910 N. Douglas St., and the late Mr. Roehl. She graduated from Appleton High School-West in 1962 and received her bachelor of science degree in 1967 from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Bolstad is a native of Minneapolis but has spent half of his life in Tanzania, where his parents were missionaries. His father, who died in 1970, was a printer and accepted a call to East Africa as such with the Lutheran Church. He stayed there for 10 years.

The son returned to Tanzania in 1966 as a Peace Corps volunteer and during his four-year tenure, also worked in Kenya.

In 1970, after the death of his father, his mother returned to Tanzania as a teacher with a seminary and now lives in a house his father had built. She will be about 200 miles from the school in which Bolstad will teach.

The young missionary holds a bachelor's degree from Augsburg College. Minneapolis, and a master's degree in geography and chemistry from Oklahoma State University, Stillwater. He speaks Swahili fluently.

Although the Lutheran Church in America has informed him that he will be teaching numerous subjects, he hopes to concentrate on his major fields of expertise at the Enaboishu Secondary School in Arusha, which is about 50 miles from Mt. Kilamanjaro.

The couple will leave Monday for New York. Their duties begin Feb. 1. Their term is 33 months, after which they will have to decide on whether to continue or leave the field.

Schacht will leave Trinity

Robert E. Schacht, assistant pastor at Trinity Lutheran Church since June, 1971, has accepted a call to serve the new mission of the Lutheran Church in America at Plymouth, Mich.

He will begin his new duties Feb. 1 and has asked the congregation for an early release due to the immediacy of the need at the mission church.

Normally, resignations are accepted 60 days in advance.

Schacht, who was ordained shortly before he came to Appleton, received his master of divinity degree from the Lutheran School of Theology. He also holds a bachelor of arts degree in business administration and sociology from Carthage College, Kenosha.

He was with an insurance firm before entering the school of theology.

ISRAEL IS "HIS LAND"
"His Land" is a Billy Graham documentary film on Israel which today is a living testimony to the words of the Old Testament prophets. The land of Israel is God's land because He gave it to His people, the Jews, and His covenant of ownership with them is forever valid.
The miracle of the Jews and their land in history, both past and present, is seen in these Scriptures: "Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, The Lord liveth, that brought up the Children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but the Lord liveth that brought up the Children of Israel from the land of the North and from All the Lands whither He had driven them: and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers . . . And I will bring again the captivity of my people 'Israel' and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of the land." Jeremiah 16:14-15 & Amos 9:14-15.
The return of the Jews to their land and the establishment of Israel as a sovereign state among the nations of the world is the most ominous sign of God's impending judgment upon the world. It is also the keystone sign of the imminent return of the Lord Jesus Christ to redeem Israel as a nation and to establish the Kingdom of God on earth. Come and see "His Land."

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Weight could affect size of male breasts

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What would cause enlarged breasts in a male? I have had this since childhood. I am near 50, married and have children.

As time goes by this problem gets worse. Is there any medication for it? I understand there is surgery but I can't afford it. —L.E.H.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a male, 51, of large frame and build. My breasts are so large I am too embarrassed to go swimming, take showers with other men, etc. I've read of a simple operation to take care of this. —J.G.

There is no single cause. I'll offer what help I can.

Enlargement of the breasts in adolescent males is not uncommon, but usually subsides in six to 12 months without any treatment.

In an adult male, if it occurs, it is likely to be after age 50. It is unusual to have this as a lifelong condition, as in L.E.H.'s case.

For some of the common factors: Large build and frame are common —the breast is an area in which fat accumulates rather readily from no apparent cause other than obesity. Why? It's not known, any more than we can specify why some people have fat hips but thin legs, or occasionally the reverse; or have fat accumulate in any particular area to the exclusion of other places.

But anyway, I wish I knew about the weight of both L.E.H. and J.G. If they are on the beefy side, losing some weight might pay dividends.

A glandular deficiency is possible in these cases —but since L.E.H. has had children, and the condition has persisted since childhood, glandular discrepancy is unlikely.

Cirrhosis of the liver can be associated with breast enlargement at this age. It's worth checking. Thyroid disorders also can be responsible and should be checked out.

If female hormones for baldness, prostate trouble or other reasons have been taken over prolonged periods, that can be involved —although I suppose, in most such cases, the patient is aware of what is happening, and the medication is more important than the side effects.

I think I should mention a warning that enlargement, on one side, and with a painless lump under or near the nipple, should be viewed suspiciously. While only 1 per cent of breast cancer occurs in males, it is too serious a thing not to keep in mind.

Because of the various possibilities, a thorough checkup by your doctor is in order. But the patient should understand that it is possible there is no dangerous underlying cause and that nothing can be done except perhaps losing weight —or resorting to surgery to remove some of the excess tissue.

Such plastic surgery is, in certain cases, the only cure, and it is being done frequently. It is not an extensive procedure.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a breast removed more than a year ago and all is well except that my arm has begun to swell.

I would appreciate knowing some exercises to make the swelling subside or stop getting worse. —Mrs. B.P.

Exercises for this are primarily those involving arm and reaching movements. Often physical therapy (massage and use of an arm cuff) is necessary.

I suggest you write to "Reach to Recovery Foundation," c/o American Cancer Society, 219 E. 42nd St., New York, N.Y. 10017, which has information dealing with this particular problem.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could using straight bleaching peroxide on the hair each month cause a weakness or loss of vision over a period of time? —D.T.

No, it would have no effect on vision.

Acne is one of the most terrible problems of growing up. If you are afflicted with this aggravation or if you have children who are, write to Thosteson in care of The Post-Crescent for a copy of his booklet, "Controlling Acne, Blackheads and Pimples." Monday hearing set on possible court reforms

GREEN BAY — Citizens will have a chance to express their views on proposed court reforms for the state at a hearing scheduled here for Monday. The Senate Jucidiciary and Insurance Committee, chaired by Sen. Gerald Lorge, R-Bear Creek, will discuss Assembly Joint Resolution 5, which would create an intermediate appellate court. The meeting is slated for 10 a.m. in the supervisors' room of the Brown County Courthouse Annex. "People could not appeal decisions from the lower courts directly to the Supreme Court, they would have to appeal to the Intermediate Appellate Court first," saidLorge. Proponents say it is needed because of the great backlog of cases, opponents say the backlog is not unreasonable and the court's establishment would cost taxpayers an estimated half-million dollars a year, according to Lorge.

Opinion

THE Post-Crescent

Underdeveloped nations also hurt

One might reasonably assume that the underdeveloped countries would be least hurt by the current world energy crisis. After all we've been told for years of the ability of struggling people to make do with hand plows, ox power and washing their clothes in streams. The bicycles of the North Vietnamese were supposed to be one reason supplies went south when major roads were bombed out.

But it seems that the more backward nations of the world are in trouble too.

For one thing, we've been exporting modern technology to them for the last couple of decades and promoting it as the means out of their miseries. Now they must be told to go back to the old ways of raising food and transporting goods.

But of even greater impact may be the indirect results of the shortage. Skyrocketing fuel costs are bound to hurt and the recent jump in price per barrel by the Arabs seems to be the first step toward quadrupling the cost. Developing countries just don't have much money. More than that, they depend upon their own exports, usually of raw materials, to keep their financial affairs in balance. If the industrial countries lack fuel for the factories, they won't need the raw materials either. The developing agricultural nations also need massive amounts of fertilizer. Those which are derivatives of petroleum won't be as readily available. And the nations won't have the money to buy what there is. The restrictions on food production will hurt exports and increase the dangers of famine.

Aid to the developing countries is also facing a cutback. Doubts about success are bound to hamper private investment and those of markets and credit —and larger costs for everything — are causing slowdowns from the richer nations.

It seems quite possible that there will be a trend back to some of the old ways. But, according to Dr. Robert West, professor of international economics at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts University, the old ways must be tempered with the new. Less energy may be used once again for producing food but more food must also be produced. The growing reliance upon large outside capital investment must stop. The ratio of calories produced to calories used can no longer be assumed to be that of the developed nations—which may also be changing their ways.

In the long run the slowdown may be an advantage. In many of the less technologically advanced societies, sudden changes have brought near chaos to tribal, religious and social values which are little less than catastrophic no matter how much more to eat there may be. Man, indeed, does not live by bread alone and the disruptions would not occur through slower, more orderly change.

The myth of U.S. omnipotence

Sir Denis Brogan, British political scientist, died recently in England. Professor Brogan's primary talent was his ability to view current events objectively.

Although Professor Brogan wrote about British and French political systems, he seemed to be most astute in his studies about the United States. He wrote ten books about America including The American Problem, U.S.A., An Outline of the Country, Its People and Institutions and America In the Modern World.

In the latter he was critical of our economic imperialism in Latin America and what he viewed as our emphasis upon private enterprise sometimes to the detriment of public service. This was in contrast to British tradition.

But Brogan perhaps was best known in this country for his comments about "the myth of American omnipotence." In reference particularly to the take-over of mainland China by the Communists, Brogan's criticism pointed out that the United States simply did not have the power or resources or insight to determine all events around the world. Thus, it wasn't the failure of General Marshall's mission to China that led to Mao Tse-tung's victory.

The events in Indochina in the last decade have proven Brogan astute. Had we listened to him then we might have avoided the dismal swamp of Vietnam.

Brogan has been criticized for his shying away from causes in preference to viewing them objectively rather than philosophically or emotionally. But the leaders of the world's government need to understand political differences and struggles if they are to make sound decisions. D. W. Brogan often has correctly interpreted trends but too often not enough people with power were listening.

Army develops new nerve gas

In 1969 Americans began to protest against the Army dumping of dangerous nerve gases in the oceans. Transportation of the volatile substances also alarmed a lot of people. The Army then decided that the toxic gases would have to be destroyed through a "detoxification" process which would cost about $200 million.

But just in case a complacent citizenry thinks that is that, take notice. The Army is now planning to spend at least another $200 million developing another kind of nerve gas.

The product is a binary gas and the Army points with pride to its major feature. Two components have to be mixed to become lethal. They would be stored in separate compartments of an artillery shell and only the explosion of the shell would rupture the diaphragm between. The Army hasn't as yet concerned itself with worries about the diaphragm disintegrating in some other way. Nor has it worked out how the product can be tested since there is some amount of antagonism to open air tests after a whole bunch of sheep were fatally stricken in Utah during another such testing. Americans quite rationally figure that a product which kills sheep in pastures might kill kids in schoolyards. They also rationally opine that an organization which carelessly lets the stuff drift to pastures might let it drift to schoolyards.

Americans might even wonder why we need another nerve gas since we seem to have quite an assortment of weapons to fight any kind of war. President Nixon has already said we wouldn't be the first to use chemical weapons. Obviously using them wouldn't kill the enemy any deader than a nuclear device would.

But the Army says nerve gas is a deterrent. Then it refused to discuss the matter until someone asked how nerve gas could deter the Soviet Union if it didn't know about it? There must be the suspicion that the Army was more worried about nervous Americans knowing about nerve gas in the United States than Russian intelligence.

So —if the diplomacy works, the shells will stay in storage until such time that they become outmoded and then the military will have to spend a few hundred million more destroying the old and making something new and more deadly.

Sen. Nelson ranks among top liberals

MADISON — The high grades awarded to Sens. Gaylord Nelson and William Proxmire of Wisconsin in the most recent assessment of the voting records of the members of Congress by the Americans for Democratic Action suggests more forcefully than any other recent measure the profound realignment of Wisconsin politics in the last decade.

The ADA functions as a kind of self-chosen assessor of congressional voting patterns on behalf of the liberal-intellectual-left in America.

It has ranked Sen. Nelson together with Sens. Edmund Muskie of Maine and Walter Mondale of Minnesota as the foremost of the loyal exponents of the liberal creed as reflected in their voting records.

Proxmire not far behind

Perhaps to the surprise of some of his constituents, Sen. Proxmire follows closely. His score is only a few percentage points below that of Nelson's, as the critics of the ADA judged the issues and the voting records in the Congress lately.

In the judgment of the most of their constituents, in all likelihood, Sen. Porxmire has been more "conservative" than his colleague.

To some degree, it is fair to suggest, that contrast between constituents' opinion and the unblinking assessment of the ADA is proof of the senior senator's political skills. He has always shown a curious ambivalence, as in his steady denunciation of what he regards as a profligate federal government.

But the ADA is not as worried about the average man's prejudices about taxes and government costs as it is concerned about the liberal creed otherwise. Thus Proxmire is in the enviable position of having the grudging respect of the fiscal "right" as well as the dogmatic "left."

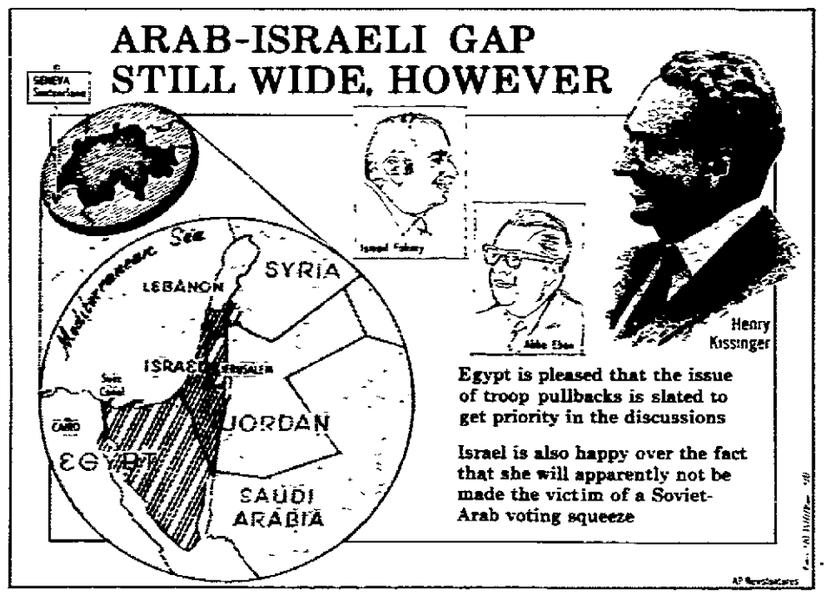

But the Nelson scorecard as marked by the ideologues of fashionable liberalism will be the more interesting in this year when he will campaign for a third six-year term in the highest office to which most American politicians can aspire.

Will he be compromised by this certification of liberal ideological purity by an organization which almost surely stands substantially to the left of the typical Wisconsin voter? It is ... likely.

It is not a judgment of the senator's courage or good faith to suggest that some of the votes for which the ADA esteems him would have been dangerous for any other man holding his seat. Gaylord Nelson is a skilled politician. He has personality attributes that allow a voting record that would make many others vulnerable. He is among the most personable of the men who have risen to high place in the state lately. He counts more personal friends, without regard to ideological conviction, than any other politician of comparable rank in this state.

He has always attracted votes of non-Democrats, even those who had little sympathy for some of his philosophical convictions. An easy and familiar style on the stump brings him many votes that others on his ticket cannot hope to lure and accounted for the most strategically important bench mark in his career, his upset election to the governorship 15 years ago.

Sen. Nelson, has a private political intelligence service that is as comprehensive as any contemporary on the Wisconsin stage. He knows the Republicans will count themselves lucky to field a reasonably representable candidate as a nominal challenger. He knows another fact of modern political life through extensive experience — that the money that increasingly determines how effectively a politician can pursue his career is no longer exclusively controlled by conservatives. There are wealthy liberals also, and they put their money behind their beliefs.

Geneva peace talks bear some fruit

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Middle East peace talks seem to be bearing some fruit even though the policy gap between Israel and the Arab states remains as wide as ever.

Egyptian sources say Cairo's faith in the diplomacy of Secretary of Henry A. Kissinger has been bolstered by the fact that the start of the talks went just about as he had predicted.

Egypt is also pleased that the conference agreed to give priority to the problem of troop pullbacks from territory fought over the war.

Israel is reported happy because the conference agreed to arrive at decisions by consensus rather than majority voting. The latter would have meant that the Egyptian-Jordanian-Soviet bloc would outvote the Israelis on key issues.

The Israelis are also reported pleased that the conference has been titled a peace conference and not a meeting with the sole aim of trying to force Israel to evacuate territory it won by force of arms.

It was also noted that foreign ministers Abba Eban of Israel and Andrei Gromyko held a rare meeting. Gromyko is cochairman of the talks. It was the first such meeting since Moscow broke relations with Israel over the 1967 war.

But despite the air of relative cordiality the differences remain, mainly over territory.

Eban said in his opening speech that Israel would refuse to pull back all the way to pre-1967 frontiers. Something that Egypt and Jordan have demanded.

The Arabs in turn spoke of restoring the "legitimate rights" of the Palestinians. This phrase has always been interpreted as a threat to liquidate the Israelis.

Eban offered compensation for lost Palestinian land, but he ruled out any Palestinian state and suggested that the refugees blend into the Arab world.

The status of Jerusalem seemed as far from solution as ever. Jordan which ruled the Arab sector until the 1967 war, has stood fast by her demands that she get it back.

Observers agreed that it would take a lot of negotiating to iron out differences which have built up between Israel and the Arabs over the past 25 years.

Media should get off President Nixon's back

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

If you will permit, me, I'd like to comment on your January 7th editorial, "The cost of Mr. Nixon's Presidency."

Some of us are a little weary with your paper's "open season" on Mr. Nixon.

When Mr. Johnson was campaigning for the Presidency, Texans were admonished by the Democratic Party to get out and vote for the President as the federal government was pouring 10 million (or was it 10 billion) a day into Texas. When your paper carried that statement in your editorial, it would have been a real public service to carry a breakdown of figures and thereby be more explicit.

During all the years of Mr. Lyndon Johnson and Mr. A. Harriman's involvement in national politics, there was a gentlemen's agreement with the press that no photo of their respective residences were to be published because their homes in Texas and New York were thought to be too grand for their voters to see. According to Life Magazine, Johnson and Harriman thought their image would thus deteriorate.

When Bobby Kenenedy was campaigning for the Presiency, it was said he was "buying" his victory at the polls. Later the Kennedy family as successful in having the chairman of the Democratic Committee assume Bobby's campaign debts. Not much was said in the press about any breakdown of figures. Compare that treatment with the harassment of Mr. Nixon.

Anyone can say anything about Mr. Nixon. It is "open season" on Mr. Nixon.

It is said that most of the present day problems of our neighbor, the Philippines, are the direct result of a free and undisciplined press. (Howard K. Smith) Their constitutional government is gone and replaced with a government by decree.

The news media should get off Mr. Nixon's back and allow the man to get on with his job, as he was elected to do.

Democratic readers hope for party unity

WASHINGTON—The first significant political development of the new year is the threat that the midterm Democratic National Convention may be turned into a promotional vehicle for 1976 presidential candidates.

That's the last thing that Democratic Chairman Robert Strauss, and most statewide party officials, desire.

Already Alabama Gov. George Wallace has approved a master plan to elect pro-Wallace convention delegates as a sort of trial run to test his strength for a presidential race. The special convention, to be held in December in Kansas City, will approve a new party charter and organizational structure, which will in turn influence the Presidential nominating process.

Wallace out in the open

Wallace, in an apparent move to stimulate supporters still concerned about his physical ability to pursue the White House, let his plans be known deliberately. There are other presidential hopefuls as well who have calculated the possible assets of the convention as a new mechanism for scoring publicity points and beginning to build a basis for national power.

Sen. Henry Jackson is the most active in this area of all the possible contenders. His staff makes no secret of the fact that its primary political chore this year is electing convention delegates whose policy views are similar to those of Jackson and who are identified with him. Jackson is working on this project in tandem with COPE, the political arm of the AFL CIO. Their motives are interdependent: Jackson is both the closest in domestic and foreign policy views of any candidate to AFL-CIO President George Meany and Meany's first choice for the 1976 nomination.

The McGovern reformers have also been trying to crank up interest among their supporters in dominating the convention, but they lack a symbolic candidate at the moment. Sen. George McGovern, campaigning for re-election in South Dakota, is trying to demonstrate a dedicated, conservative attitude toward local affairs and wipe out residual memories of his national reputation as a militant liberal. Some liberals have hoped they could form a front behind Sen. Edward Kennedy, but so far Kennedy has displayed little more than academic interest in the mechanics of party organization to be determined at the convention.

Strauss trying to keep peace

If indeed the convention appears in the next few months to be turning into a referendum on presidential candidates, DNC Chairman Strauss will try to invent some way to stop it. He has worked hard, with great success, to keep the convention planning good-natured and relatively noncontroversial. National policy questions at the convention will be severely restricted, the result of a careful Strauss-directed compromise between the McGovern people and the regulars. Strauss does not want a noisy battle among party presidential candidates two years before it is required.

The convention will be held shortly after the congressional elections, when party officials will either be buoyant and dreaming of the White House or down in the dumps and despairing of the White House. So some presidential speculation is probably inevitable, and some comparison of what appears to be the party's mainstream thought with the available talent.

The delegates will be chosen either by state primary or regular party district caucuses as the state officials determine. They are to submit their plans by Feb. 1. One-sixth of the convention is reserved for officeholders in a move to correct the imbalance of the 1972 convention at which few elected officials were represented, although they were supposed to carry out later the policies mandated by that convention.

Mr. F. Kutier complemented the Firemen upon their excellent oyster supper on Saturday evening last, which was quite largely attended by the boys in their red jackets.

The best of humor prevailed and the occasion was particularly enjoyable. Louis Hertziger did his full share toward making the gathering a pleasant one.

The new Engine House is now finished, we believe, and the Boys will have a fine company room on the second floor, which will be fitted up and furnished in handsome style, where they can feel "at home" to their friends — especially visiting firemen from other localities. It might not be a bad idea to have opened with a social soon.

4 congressional committees plan to investigate energy crisis

on the paperwork of the new rules, FEO officials said.

Going into effect Tuesday will be regulations covering gasoline, middle distillate oils including home heating fuel and diesel fuel, and propane gas.

Regulations covering the distribution of crude oil, aviation fuel, residual fuel oi, butane gas and minor products took effect Dec. 27.

On the job front, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported Friday that there were some job losses in various industries "which appear to be due to actual or anticipated shortages of gasoline."

Hardest hit were automotive dealership and service station workers where employment declined a seasonally adjusted 50,000 in December.

And government analysts said evidence indicated that the gasoline shortage as well as the general economic slowdown may have been responsible for the additional loss of nearly 50,000 jobs in service industries.

Further energy related developments included:

–Saxbe said the antitrust division is checking to see whether major oil companies collaborated to contrive a fraudulent fuel shortage. But he noted that antitrust officials say that so far they have found little evidence of such collusion.

–The Exxon Co. announced it is increasing its gasoline prices 0.7 cents a gallon and home heating oil by 5.1 cents a gallon immediately.

–A Japanese official said that Arab oil supplies are reaching the United States and the Netherlands despite the embargo.

–United Air Lines announced that 490 ground crew employes will be laid off Jan. 26 because of the energy crisis. Officials said these will include customer service attendants, ramp service agents and food and maintenance personnel.

U.S. shouldn't pay Nixon defense bill, Saxbe says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe says the taxpayers should not be forced to finance President Nixon's defense if he is impeached and brought to trial in the Senate.

He said Friday it would be improper for lawyers on the government payroll, including those in the Justice Department, to represent the President in any impeachment trial.

If the accusations against Nixon "proceed to impeachment, I think at that time, there will have to be set up an independent defense," he said. "I think there would have to be established a defense fund."

Saxbe left open the possibility that Justice Department lawyers might play some role in representing Nixon during early stages of impeachment proceedings. But he said he considers it unlikely that they will do so.

"Suppose the only grounds they come up with for impeachment are that they don't like him. I think then obviously it would be within the scope of the Justice Department to represent the President," he said in response to questions at his first news conference since taking office a week ago.

"If on the other hand, it's based upon indictments or based upon solid charges of criminality, I think then you have reached the point where you're getting beyond the scope of his duties as President," he continued.

But he said if the case reaches the Senate, "for whatever reason, ... the Justice Department is out of it."

Saxbe said "it would be a mistake" for the House to vote impeachment on grounds that Nixon has lost the nation's confidence. The Constitution provides that a President may be impeached for high crimes and misdemeanors, and Saxbe said he believes that probably would require evidence of an indictable offense under criminal law.

But he said it will be up to the courts to judge.

The attorney general reiterated his pledge of independence for Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

He said if prosecutors develop evidence against Nixon, it will be up to Jaworski and U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica to decide whether to present it to a federal grand jury or to the House committee considering impeachment.

But he said "there's a serious question" whether a sitting President can be indicted prior to impeachment.

On other subjects, Saxbe endorsed legislation to protect individuals from an invasion of privacy by the government and private business.

He gave no details of the proposal he favors.

He promised a public report after an internal investigation of an FBI counterintelligence program against the New Left movement. The operation was ordered by the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover "to expose, disrupt and otherwise neutralize" the New Left in 1968 and terminated by Hoover in 1971.

Drug convictions to be appealed for 3 in Turkey

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Three young Americans sentenced to life imprisonment on drug charges plan to appeal their cases as soon as the judges make public their explanation of their verdict, according to the trio's Turkish lawyer.

Kathryn A. Zenz, 28, a nurse from Lancaster, Wis.; JoAnn M. McDaniel, 29, a former dental assistant from Coos Bay, Ore., and Robert E. Hubbard, 22, who has no permanent address, were sentenced to death on Dec. 28 in Antakya, southeast Turkey. Then the court commuted the sentences to life inprisonment.

They were arrested with four other American girls in December 1972 at the Syrian border when customs officals discovered over 330 pounds of hashish concealed in the upholstery of the three minibuses they were using.

The other four girls were freed on bail, allowed to leave Turkey and acquitted Dec. 28. American sources at the trial said the court accepted testimony that they were only passengers, while the three who were convicted were the drivers.

The lawyer for the trio, Kayyum Menziletoglu, said Thursday there is evidence that Miss Zenz and Miss McDaniel could not have known about the hashish in the minibuses. He said this evidence should have resulted in their acquittal if not that of Hubbard.

Policeman killed in Racine, man then shoots self

RACINE, Wis. (AP) — A policeman investigating a babysitter's concern over a quarrel was fatally wounded Friday. Police said the assailant then fatally shot himself.

The victims were identified as Detective James R. Fine, 30, and Donald Morgenson, 25.

Fine was approaching a westside dwelling when, authorities said, a shot was fired with a 30.06 rifle from a doorway in which Morgenson slew himself with the same rifle a moment later.

Authorities said they were summoned by a neighbor whose daughter, a baby-sitter, had reported Morgenson was visiting the dwelling, carrying a rifle and arguing.

The occupants of the house were two divorced sisters and three children.

Fine was approaching the house from a sidewalk a few steps ahead of other policemen when he was shot in a shoulder.

Morgenson's body was found in the living room. He was employed by an airline reservation bureau.

Six babies doing well

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP)— Doctors have predicted a good chance of survival for three boys and three girls born Friday to a 25-year-old woman who had taken a fertility drug before conception.

"All six babies are doing well," said a hospital statement 24 hours after the birth in the Mowbray Maternity Hospital.

The mother, Susan Rosenkowitz, was reported by hospital authorities as making satisfactory progress after the delivery by Caesarian section. Doctors said she may be allowed to leave her bed later today and see her babies.

The hospital report said the infants, who are spending the critical first 40 hours of life in an incubator, show no complications. They continue to be fed intravenously.

Mrs. Rosenkowtiz and her 39-year-old husband, Colin, a businessman, also have a 7-year-old daughter and a 5-year-old son.

The multiple deliveries were made withing 10 minutes. Doctors said the babies were well formed but one was much smaller than the others. They range in weight from 2½ to 4½ pounds.

Sextuplets often are born after only 32 weeks gestation, but Mrs. Rosenkowitz had a full nine-month pregnancy. After four months of pregnancy she had taken the drug orciprinaline, a muscle relaxer aimed at preventing a premature delivery, doctors said.

The father reportedly has sold all story and picture rights of the births to a Durban magazine for about $90,000 and has declined all other interviews. Newsmen were not allowed into the hospital wing where the babies were born.

Doctors to test Crosby's lungs

BURLINGAME, Calif. (AP) —Doctors will probe singer Bing Crosby's left lung today to try to find what caused a lesion that isn't responding to treatment.

The 69-year-old entertainer, whose condition continues to be satisfactory, has been walking around the hospital talking to other patients, his intravenous tubes trailing from a rolling pole.

Crosby's family physician, Dr. Stanley Hanfling, says the ailing crooner will be anesthetized for the diagnostic procedure in which a flexible probe with a mirror-type device will be placed in the tubes leading to the lung.

Crosby went to the hospital on New Year's Eve, and his condition eventually was diagnosed as pneumonia.

Glue spreader is handy for craft work

BY CAPPY DICK

Any boy or girl who discovers a need for a glue spreader that will enable precise applications of glue can easily make one out of a wire paper clip.

One or two simple bends in

This is easy

the clip will do the trick. Just twist it to the shape shown in Figure 1. One part of the revised clip will serve as a handle and the other part will be the spreader "blade."

When it is necessary to apply an even layer of glue to a precise area of paper, cardboard, wood or other material, squeeze a blob of glue at the center of the area, then spread it around the surface as shown in Figure 2, working it up the edge of the area and into each corner without allowing any of it to overflow to an adjoining surface.

When you have finished the gluing job, wipe the wire free of glue so it will be ready for use at another time and won't be stuck to any surface on which you place it to await further use.

Monday: Lots more good fun for every boy and girl.

Neenah Island chilled by 6-hour power outage

BY PETER BACH
Post-Crescent staff writer

NEENAH —No serious problems have been reported so far as a result of a major power outage Friday night on the Neenah Island which affected about 1,000 customers, leaving some without power for nearly six hours.

Walter Sandberg, a Wisconsin Michigan Power Co. spokesman, said the outage was traced to a mechanical failure at the Abby Street substation. A transformer apparently malfunctioned, he said. There was no indication that the zero temperatures played a role in the power failure, he added.

The outage began at 5:18 p.m. Power was restored at 10:45 p.m., he said.

Power company officials rushed a mobile substation to Neenah from Appleton to aid during the outage and rerouted power to Theda Clark Memorial Hospital, the island's most critical user.

Power was restored to Theda Clark about 7 p.m. as a result of the emergency measures, although Gerald Aldridge, president of the hospital board, reported that the complex's three standby generators kicked in automatically, providing normal power in crucial areas.

During the dinner hour, however, he said, lights were dimmed in the hospital dining room. Diners ate by candlelight.

By the time power was restored to the last customer at 10:45 p.m., temperatures were at about zero. They plummeted to an official overnight low of 13 below zero, a power company spokesman said.

Supermarkets, gasoline stations, and commercial businesses were without power during the outage.

At the Food Queen Super Market, 346 First St., about 20 to 25 customers were lined up at four cash registers and had to be checked out by hand.

A store employe said workers at the checkouts tallied groceries on sheets of paper, used flashlights and cranked the registers by hand to make change.

A resident of the east end of the island near Lake Winnebago said the temperatures in his home fell to 55 degrees. His thermostat was set at 65 degrees, he said. He used candles and burned wood in the fireplace.

"This is the longest duration for an outage that we've had for some time," Sandberg said. "It's highly unusual and the company is taking it very seriously."

He said WMPCO had not received any reports of severe inconveniences or damage because of the power failure.

Sandberg said the area affected included virtually the whole island, bounded by Nicolet Avenue and the river channel on the north and south, and the lake and Commercial Street on the east and west.

Neenah orders study of Oak Hill Cemetery fees

NEENAH —The city-owned Oak Hill Cemetery is operating at a deficit and the finance committee wants to know what it can do to reverse the situation.

Mayor Roman V. Hauser was directed Friday to find a consultant to study all alternatives and come up with a recommendation on how to get the cemetery into the black.

Hauser, pointing out that he had already talked to one person about it, indicated that the city may have to start charging more for the remaining space in the cemetery.

In 1973, city taxpayers had to subsidize the cemetery operation to make up a $22,000 deficit.

Hauser indicated that prices for lots may have to be increased as would other charges for grave openings and perpetual care agreements.

John Sahli, finance director, said he had talked to the two banks about different investment procedures, to earn more money on the perpetual care money. He said the trust officers had asked to talk to the finance committee about the investments.

Currently, one half the sale price is channeled into the perpetual care account while the other half is used for operating costs, according to Hauser.

"We just don't know enough about this to be able to come to a decision," Ald. Michael Ellis said, suggesting "Why don't we spend a couple of dollars on a professional study."

In other action, before going into executive session to discuss what Hauser said was "property acquisition" concerning the Breezewood overpass and extension, the committee:

— Recommended the purchase of a $14,000 home at 242 Second St., for school purposes.

—Turned down a suggestion that the Schneider Tank Lines be charged $54 for city engineering costs relating to the installation of a sewer and sand trap. The move came after Ald. Jeffry Smith cautioned the committee about charging Schneider "for work that we do free for other firms in connection with sewer work.

— Heard a report from Smith on purchasing insurance for the underground sewer lift stations where gas can accumulate and a suggestion that aldermen be covered by liability insurance.

— Directed Wayne Bryan, public works director, to work out an arrangement so street lights on N. Commercial and Wisconsin Avenue will be turned on during the early morning hours because of Daylight Saving Time.

Two women injured in Neenah pile-up

NEENAH —Two women were treated for back pains and released from Theda Clark Memorial Hospital Friday after their cars were involved in a three-car line-of-traffic accident on Winneconne Avenue.

Police said the women, both drivers, were Dorothy O. Harrison, 60, 778 Madison St., Neenah, and Joyce L. Engelman, 45, 1385 Sunset Lane, Menasha.

Driver of the third car, Donald A. Tate, 19, route 1, Hortonville, escaped unharmed.

Neenah police said Mrs. Harrison was stopped on Winneconne to make a left turn onto Zemlock Street when Mrs. Engelman, unable to stop, struck her from behind. Tate, also westbound and unable to stop, slid into the rear of the Engelman car.

Mopping up an oil spill

Gilbert Paper Co. personnel were busy with cleanup operations after an accidental oil spill that sent a layer of oil floating along the shore near the Washington Street Bridge in Menasha. The slick, which was reported Thursday from an accident at the firm, was brought under control by the use of floating lines and straw dumped to soak up the oil. 2nd council contest forms in Neenah

NEENAH - MENASHA—A second potential aldermanic contest has developed in Neenah with one candidate's filing of nomination papers while new candidates have taken out papers for positions on the Menasha Council and Winnebago County Board.

A second potential race in Neenah was created when Donald L. Herzberg, 204 Stanley St., took out papers for 2nd Ward alderman. Herzberg is employed in the inventory control department at Neenah Foundry.

George Scherck, 2270 Henry St., has filed papers for 2nd Ward alderman. The incumbent, Walter Loehning, indicated he won't seek another term.

The other potential race is in Neenah's 8th Ward, where Donald Colburn already has filed papers. The contender, Jack Evenstad, 613 Elm St., has not yet filed.

Other developments in Neenah include a new contender for 6th Ward alderman. She is Beverly R. Napuck, 975 Bridgewood Drive, a homemaker who took out papers Thursday. The incumbent, Donald Otto, is not seeking another term. Tenth Ward incumbent Jeff Smith filed papers and John W. Unkefer, 874 Irish Road, took out papers for school commissioner.

In Menasha, Thomas R. Niesen, 849 Keyes St., took out papers for 3rd Ward alderman. Niesen is vice president of the Bank of Menasha.

In the county, Donald K. Davies, Oshkosh, took out papers for Dist. 30 and Mary Ann Warning, 43 Zarling Ave., took out papers for Dist. 13 in the Town of Oshkosh. The Dist. 30 incumbent, Virginia Nolan, is not seeking re-election. Dist. 13 incumbent, Penny Christenson, has taken out papers. David Nobbe, 228 Alcott Drive, Neenah, took out papers Friday for Neenah Dist. 22.

Town of Oshkosh citizens reject reassessment move

OSHKOSH — A proposal to revalue property in the Town of Oshkosh this year on a basis of full market value failed to find much support from town property owners who attended an informational meeting at Sunset School this week.

In an advisory to the town board, property owners attending voted 70 to 30 against revaluation this year.

"I would assume that the town board wouldn't go ahead with revaluation now," Town Chairman Philip Grundy said after the meeting.

The town hasn't been reassessed since 1952, Grundy explained. He said the town assessor's figures are at about 37.5 per cent of the state's recommended full value and that glaring inequities are becoming apparent.

"Inequities grow with inflation and time," he said. "Technically, the town ought to reassess every 10 years or so. People always say they are willing to pay their fair share of taxes. The only way is with equitable assessment of property values."

Grundy said the board had estimated a complete revaluation by a professional consulting firm would cost about $25,000. The proposal was to start planning this month for reassessment reginning about March and completion before budget time.

"I hate to see the state take more control," Grundy commented. "Meetings like the one last week lead to that."

He said this spring the state will assess small manufacturing properties in the state. "They're talking about doing the commercial in the future. It won't be long before local government will lose that function too unless the people want to keep assessments current."

Neenah board OKs all but 1 state proposal

NEENAH — The board of education has authorized Mrs. Anne Towne, delegate to the Wisconsin Association of School Boards convention next week, to vote in favor of all but one of the 17 resolutions to be acted on at the convention.

The resolution that Neenah board members oppose is one that would seek re-evaluation of the new state aids formula that uses property valuations as the prime element in determining aids for school districts. The resolution was submitted by several school districts whose members feel the aids formula penalizes districts with higher quality educational programs and favors districts with weaker programs.

Some of the major resolutions the Neenah school board will favor are for increased transportation aid; improved teacher certification methods; a legislative study of the timetable school boards must follow for contracts, budgets, annual meetings and the like; a recommendation to the legislature that city school districts be required to have July 1 to June 30 budget periods; an effort to have "rank in class" listing eliminated as a requirement for entrance to public post-high school education and as a factor in application for financial aids; and a resolution to put the state group on record as favoring the retention of local option for determining the starting date of the school term.

The Menasha Board of Education also is sending a delegate to the convention. Mrs. Fern Gaertner, president of the board, will vote on the resolutions on the basis of feedback she is receiving from Menasha board members.

The convention is being held in Milwaukee Jan. 16-18. Major addresses will be presented by Dr. Barbara Thompson, state superintendent, Gov. Patrick Lucey, and Stanley York, director of the state's emergency energy assistance office.

Driver escapes injury when train hits car

NEENAH — A 21-year-old Menasha woman escaped serious injury shortly after 7 a.m. today after her car was struck by a Soo Line freight train at the Main Street crossing.

Cheryl M. Neuber, 340 First St., complained of a sore leg and was advised to see a doctor.

Police said she was traveling east on Main and her car slid onto the tracks, then stalled as she tried to back off. The Northbound train, operated by Clarence A. Kalupy, Fond du Lac, struck the auto in the right front.

Stereo, TV stolen from Oshkosh home

OSHKOSH — More than $1,500 worth of TV and stereo equipment was stolen from Christ Tzakias, 926 N. Main St., Oshkosh, when he was out of town between Wednesday and Friday.

Thieves apparently entered through an unlocked bathroom window and gained entrance to the apartment above a garage.

Meters spell cashiers at Neenah ramp March 1

By ROBERT LAUX
Post-Crescent staff writer

NEENAH —Starting March 1, the two cashiers at the Doty Avenue parking ramp will be out of a job, replaced by about 20 or 25 meters suspended from the ceiling of a lower level.

Monthly stickers will still cost $6.

The health and social services committee made the recommendations Thursday night, after a brainstorming session with Mayor Roman Hauser, Administrator Joseph Kraus, Public Works Director Wayne Bryan and Water Works Director John Jurgenson.

The committee ruled out a machine to dispense tickets, refunded by downtown merchants Hauser said. "I don't think the parking ramp is for downtown shopping." Ald. Steven Spanbauer asked the mayor if he had contacted the manufacturers of the machine, and Hauser said, "They're from California —that's a few miles out." The machine would have cost about $700 to $900, Hauser said.

Kraus said he figured the cost of salaries, at the end of 1973, to have been about $2,800. Both cahsiers at first were paid through the federal Emergency Employment Act, which will expire in March; one of the cashiers was paid by the city since April, when a worker quit, and the city lost EEA funding on that position. When EEA ends, Kraus said, the salaries would be about $1,400 a month.

He said the two workers could be offered other jobs with the city, through the Teamsters union, or paid unemployment compensation.

Bryan said, "It's my own shopping experience, and I'll lay a very small wager that nobody in this room uses the ramp for downtown shopping. Without substantial redevelopment downtown, the ramp will never pay for itself —of course, redevelopment went out the window." Nobody accepted the bet.

Hauser said the problem should be held over until bids were taken on the old city hall, next door.

Walter Chrapla suggested the city spend money on a study of the ramp, anywhere from $2,400 to $3,000, "not to make it self-sufficient but not so much of a drain." The debt service and principal payment on the ramp this year is $64,000.

But the committee, and city administrators, felt the best course would be to put in about 25 meters for casual parkers. New meters would have cost $62 apiece, with another $15 to $20 for installing them.

Two sessions for NM safety council

NEENAH - MENASHA —Meetings of the Twin City Safety Council are scheduled on Wednesday and Thursday nights. The first is the regular monthly meeting, and the subject will be industrial noise and hearing preservation.

The second, special meeting will deal with the Occupational Safety and Health Act.

The Wednesday meeting begins at 6:30 p.m. at Germania Hall. Dr. M. Thomas Summar will be the speaker. The Thursday meeting is a joint session with the Fox Valley Safety Council and the Chamber of Commerce.

Fire destroys mobile home

Fire early Friday afternoon destroyed a mobile home occupied by the Gary Voigt family, route 2, Black Creek.

Most of the family's personal belongings also were lost. Damage was estimated at $15,000.

Voigt and his wife, Carol, were at work and a 13-year-old daughter was in school when a neighbor, Joseph Berrens, discovered the fire. The mobile home was on Wege Road, about a mile and a half west of Outagamie County Trunk A.

The Town of Center Fire Department, which found the blaze out of control, remained at the scene about three hours. Fire Chief Deleimar Schmchel said the cause of the blaze could not be positively established. A family spokesman said it was believed to have started from a faulty furnace.

The Voigts had lived in the trailer about three years. They are staying at the neighboring Elroy Plamann home until permanent housing can be found.

The Red Cross also has appealed for help for the family.

UWO student fees to finance legal aid

Post-Crescent Madison bureau

MADISON —The University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh student body claimed a major victory Friday when the University Board of Regents voted to allow the campus to use segregated student fees to finance a legal services program for students.

The regents decided, on a hotly debated 9-6 vote, to give the students permission to use some of their own fees to finance a program that last year existed through contributions.

UW Senior Vice-President Donald Percy recommended that a one-year trial period be allowed on the Oshkosh campus only, with the understanding that the program could be expanded to other campuses if it proved successful.

Students at UW-Green Bay attempted to get a legal services plan budgeted last year but Chancellor Edward Weidner vetoed it.

The regents vetoed the first such suggestion by Oshkosh students in November, 1972. Percy said the performance of the service during the last year warranted a trial period under student fees.

Michael Pirce, of the State Bar Association, appeared at the meeting. He said such group services are being watched closely by the Bar and monitored by staff members. The Oshkosh group met all the necessary qualifications.

Regent Walter Renk of Sun Prairie opposed the use of student fees, saying that the services rendered by the agency could just as well be handled by a regular attorney. "The people outside the University don't get this service," Renk said. "Why should those inside get it?

Regent Roland Day of Madison said the decision to use student fees should be left to the students, while Regent Milton Neshek of Elkhorn strongly opposed the plan, saying it would only raise student fees.

"If its a good idea," Neshek said, "let's find money for it. Buy why hit the kids or the parents for it?"

Steve Ballard, a member of the legal aid service, said the program would not cost students more in fees since lower priorities would be eliminated to make room for it.

LU president also urges avenue delay

The president of Lawrence University has urged city leaders to take the advice of their planning consultant and not do anything to E. College Avenue until long-range planning for the area is completed.

And President Thomas S. Smith pledges the help of the university in expediting the completion of the comprehensive plan that consultants Harland Bartholomew and Associaties say should be completed before the city reconstructs or otherwise changes the traffic thoroughfare that runs through the heart of the university campus.

Thomas Smith

The memorandum from the consultants, recommending that nothing be done on College until the long-range plan is completed in about one year) "clearly states that nothing should be done on E. College Avenue before a long-range plan is completed —a position which has been supported by me, the Lawrence University trustees and the Lawrence University alumni," write Smith, in a letter Friday addressed to the City Council, Mayor James Sutherland and the council's Street and Sanitation Committee.

The Street and Sanitation Committee is slated to take up the report of the consultants —which was released by the mayor to aldermen and the public Friday —on Monday.

"We feel that this decision which will affect the Appleton community and Lawrence University for 50 to 100 years, if not forever, deserves the very best information and thinking we can put together, even if it takes another 18 months," wrote Smith in his letter.

The consultants recommended that nothing be done with E. College until their update of the city's 1966 comprehensive plan is completed. That task, which is being done by them and Planning and Development Director Jack Hetu, is expected to be completed early in 1975.

In addition to recommending a delay in city action on E. College, the consultant's report recommended against any widening of the roadway. The City Council, several weeks ago, had given Public Works Director Robert Miller the go-ahead to draw up plans for widening of the street from Drew Street to Rankin Street based on a boulevard concept.

The consultants said there were several alternatives preferable to widening the through-campus street. In their review of several of them, they singled out a bypass along Franklin Street as the best but emphasized that they were not ready to recommend the northerly bypass (which they did in the 1966 plan) until the long-range plan was completed.

Earlier this week, the Lawrence University Alumni Association announced that its board of directors had approved a resolution urging the city to close off E. College Avenue between Drew and Lawe streets in favor of a bypass.

Smith, speaking for a university which has in the past indicated its support for a closing off of the busy E. College Avenue, said in his letter Friday that the university was anxious to "help, in whatever way possible, to expedite the completion of a comprehensive long-range plan.

"The viability and attractiveness of downtown Appleton will not only serve the community well but it will also help to attract prospective students to Lawrence" he continued. "As leaders of this community in 1974, we must be prepared to tell our grandchildren why the city is like it is in 2001. I want to show my descendants how well we did our job."

Debate ends on missions of 15 UW schools

Post-Crescent Madison bureau

MADISON — The University of Wisconsin Board of Regents ended five months of statewide debate Friday by approving revised mission statements for the 15 institutions of the University of Wisconsin System.

The decision means that UW-Green Bay and UW-Stout will become designated special mission campuses while UW-Oshkosh and UW-Eau Claire will be developed as regional graduate centers.

The mission statements were changed only slightly from the preliminary draft that was circulated prior to the 26 statewide public hearings that began in November. Most of the other campuses were appeased with specialized programs of their own and almost all campuses were left with their coveted teacher education programs.

The final drafts were approved unanimously despite strong disagreement from the Association of University of Wisconsin Faculty (TAUWF), which asked for a one month's delay on the adoption. TAUWF President Charles Kenney said the designation of Green Bay and Stout as special campuses gave them special status that was unfair to the other campuses.

Kenny called the recent hearings "window-dressing" and suggested that issuance of the final drafts during the holidays was a purposeful attempt to avoid faculty and campus discussion.

But Kenny's arguments were diluted by several regents who said they had changed their minds since September and lent full support to the new missions. Regent John Lavine of Chippewa Falls repudiated Kenney's objections and said he was angry that there would even be a suggestion that the hearings were window-dressing.

Regent Mary Williams said she did not feel that Green Bay and Stout were being given special status but admitted that the schools did have special missions that were altogether different from the other campuses. A Stevens Point resident, she had been one of the strongest opponents to the special mission assignment in September.

The new missions are part of an attempt by the regents to follow the mandate of the system merger by cutting some of the little-used programs and eliminating duplication in the system.

Green Bay will remain primarily associated with the theme of man and his environment and develop undergraduate and graduate programs to that subject. Stout will be concerned with professional careers in industry, technology, home economics and vocational rehabilitation.

The assignment of Oshkosh and Eau Claire as regional graduate centers has kicked up more of a fuss. The original suggestion by Central Administration seemed to imply that all other campuses, except Madison and Milwaukee, would lose their graduate programs.

But the issue has subsided with the later announcement that many graduate programs would remain at the other campuses and the voluntary formation of consortiums among the campuses.

Eau Claire, River Falls, La Crosse, Stout and Superior have formed the West Central Wisconsin Consortium (WCWC) to determine how the graduate programs at the campuses can best be merged.

Donald Smith, vice president for Academic Affairs, said officials of Oshkosh, Green Bay and Stevens Point would meet soon to devise strategy for best utilizing Oshkosh as a regional graduate center. He said the findings of WCWC may also help at Oshkosh.

Several regents said they were supporting the statements with the understanding that they can always be changed. Regent John Dixon of Appleton warned that the statements "are not written in granite."

Down, but not out

Today didn't go according to plan for 14-year-old Lori Vande Wettering, 1919 E. Frances St., Appleton. Her hope was to have attended the second session of The Post-Crescent's ski school this morning near New London. But an accident — a broken leg — at the first outing last Saturday changed all that. So ski school director Charles Torinus tried to brighten her spirits by presenting some gifts and the official school patch, which signifies her attendance — brief though it was — at the annual event. "I'm doing fine," said Lori, adding that she plans to be skiing again as soon as possible. It was the first such incident in many years at the ski school, Torinus noted. (Post-Crescent photo)

Speener, DeLaHunt at odds

Outagamie County Health Center Supt. Eugene K. Speener was asked to resign at least twice this week by County Board Chairman Russell DeLaHunt, who had been one of his strongest supporters.

Speener told The Post-Crescent Friday afternoon that he will not resign. DeLaHunt said he no longer can defend him, in large part because of reaction he is getting from the public.

Reliable sources had said at midweek that Speener, after conferring with DeLaHunt Tuesday night, might resign from the $21,000 a year post.

DeLaHunt acknowledged that he talked with Speener again Thursday and on the telephone just before a meeting at the Health Center Friday afternoon regarding a resignation.

Speener would say only that he has talked to DeLaHunt numerous times about a variety of subjects. He would not confirm or deny that he had talked about resigning.

Speener, 48, superintendent since 1967, was charged with three felony counts of misconduct in public office after a lengthy John Doe investigation last year.

The district attorney's office said Speener admitted getting a television set from a New York chemical company after he ordered $1,800 in floor wax; that he granted an unauthorized pay raise to an accountant and that he billed the county for hundreds of dollars in personal, long distance telephone calls.

Waupaca County Judge A. Don Zwickey dismissed all three charges after a preliminary hearing.

Speener has come under fire from a growing number of county board members during the past several months. A few supervisors had called for his resignation before the John Doe started last July.

The county's Board of Social Services has been especially critical of Speener and has repeatedly argued that he is not capable of properly running the Health Center.

DeLaHunt, Speener and supervisors Eugene Higgins and George Schroeder were at a special meeting at the Health Center Friday afternoon to discuss a proposed $200,000 remodeling job there.

At the start of the meeting, DeLaHunt asked Speener if he had any long-range plans. The question referred to their earlier conversations at which Speener's resignation was discussed, DeLaHunt later acknowledged.

DeLaHunt said the new unified health services board has been bogged down over reaction to Speener's being appointed its acting director. Some members of the 15-member board do not think he should have the top health job, which pays nothing above his superintendent's salary.

If Speener's future with the county were known, DeLaHunt said, the unified health board "could use its full potential."

"We all have a right to know what your long-range plans are," he told Speener.

Speener said if was his understanding the meeting was called to discuss conversion of part of the Health Center to a Public Medical Institution (PMI) and a related $200,000 remodeling program.

"Now I'm being asked an extremely difficult question as it relates to me," he complained.

He has not applied for the job of permanent health services program director, he said, and as acting director he has done only as instructed.

"I have no further comment, Mr. DeLeHunt," Speener remarked. The discussion then turned to the remodeling plan. Higgins and Schroeder remained silent during the exchange between DeLaHunt and Speener.

DeLaHunt later told a reporter he has gotten considerable reaction, especially from fellow Kaukauna residents, for his strong defense of Speener.

He said he could no longer defend Speener. "I told him he'll have to take his licks," DeLaHunt recalled.

DeLaHunt is a member of the unified health services board. It was learned Friday that he will not seek re-election to another term as county board chairman but he will seek a return as supervisor from Kaukauna.

Contracts to come before county board

The first of the proposed contract settlements with Outagamie County employe unions will go to the county board for approval Tuesday, and part of an accompanying wage proposal may run into opposition.

Also high on the agenda will be the remodeling proposals for Riverview General Hospital and Sanatorium and the county Health Center, both of which are expected to generate emotional debate.

State highway division officials also have been invited to address the board on what the effect would be to have the state take over the proposed Tri-County Expressway.

The recommended contract settlement is with Local 2416 representing the case workers in the Department of Social Services.

Accompanying it, however, is a recommended 5.5 per cent salary increase for all supervisory personnel in the department, including Director James Stampp and deputy director Ray Kaskey.

Supv. Eugene Higgins, chairman of the Board of Social Services, said he did not feel that Stampp and Kaskey should be included with the other supervisory personnel.

The proposed raises would put Stampp's annual salary at $17,547. The Board of Social Services submitted a resolution in November asking that Stampp's salary be increased to $18,800. That resolution was referred to the personnel committee where it still sits.

Higgins said he felt his board's resolution should be handled before the personnel committee recommendations are acted upon.

The main provisions in the proposed union contract settlement are a $45 monthly salary increase; an increase of $2.50 monthly to $25 in the county's contribution toward the employe's share of state retirement; making Good Friday a full day holiday instead of a half day; if Dec. 24 or Dec. 31 fall on Saturday or Sunday, the preceeding Friday would be recognized for the half-day holiday, and the county would pay 100 per cent of hospital insurance for single coverage and continue 50 per cent payment of family coverage.

Another proposal from the personnel committee would be to put the county nurse and her staff in the grade structure of the salary program, and not continue them on a contract basis.

York becomes less pessimistic

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wisconsin may be getting wiser about the whereabouts of its fuel, but the energy crisis is apparently becoming more distressing for nonsmokers and more inconvenient for snowbound motorists.

The latest rounds of bureaucratic commentary emanating from the state capital concerning the energy situation contain at least one optimistic note from Wisconsin's emergency energy coordinator, Stanley York.

He said Friday his frustrations over a lack of data about fuel sales, supplies and anticipated consumption are beginning to abate.

York said he is establishing a Feb. 1 deadline for more than 1,000 companies to supply his staff with reliable information on fuel oil.

He had said he was powerless to wrest necessary data from petroleum corporations. So the legislature gave him authority last month to go to court if suppliers continue to be stubborn.

York said he had been handicapped when trying to reply to complaints and inquiries from service stations, businesses and their customers.

"There has been no mandatory gasoline program, and that has left us frustrated," he said.

If York feels less frustration, the state health officer is feeling more concern about citizens' lungs while the State Highway Commission is issuing orders about less maintenance on snow-coated roads.

Dr. George Handy said a fuel-saving modification in the state's minimum requirements for pumping air into places of public accommodation could lead to stale air in heavily traveled buildings unless occupants show good sense.

Without the customary flow of fresh air through ventilation systems, he said, tobacco smoke may accumulate in quantities hazardous to persons with allergies and pulmonary conditions.

"I would ask smokers to recognize their obligations to those around them and to show consideration," he said.

To lessen the demand for furance heat, the required amount of intake of winter air for public buildings has been reduced, at least until May 5.

Highway officials said about 11,000 miles of rural roads are going to get less attention from snowplows, a reflection of potential fuel shortages.

Too tattered

Sacred Heart School in Appleton has a new flag today, thanks to the local Daughters of the American Revolution chapter. The DAR is sponsoring a program to properly destroy old, tattered flags, with a flag-burning ceremony planned around Flag Day. Handing over the old flag, above, is Sister Julie, Sacred Heart principal, while Miss Elinor Laird of the DAR presents a new flag. The DAR decided to take the action because it had been told that local residents are discarding old flags with trash. (Post-Crescent photo)

DeLaHunt to step down after two terms as board chairman

Russell DeLaHunt will not seek a third term as chairman of the Outagamie County Board in April.

The Kaukauna supervisor will announce his decision at the January board session Tuesday, he revealed today.

His surprise action is expected to open the gates for several other supervisors interested in the board leadership job which, at the start of the new, two-year term in April, will pay $4,500 a year.

Although no other supervisors have announced their candidacy, several have confided privately that they are strongly considering such a move. Election is by majority vote of the full board.

DeLaHunt, 47, will seek re-election to the board next spring. He has represented Kaukauna for 21 years, having served on all key committees.

Carl Runte, 70, a former Kaukauna supervisor, might oppose DeLaHunt in the spring election. However, neither candidate has filed papers yet. Runte, a retired store operator, quit the board two years ago after two terms, when reapportionment placed him in DeLaHunt's 29th district.

In making his decision not to seek a return as board chief, DeLaHunt indicated that the demands of a full-time job at Thilmany Pulp & Paper Co. and an increasing county workload and related pressures were beginning to wear on him.

It was a "tremendous relief" when, after conferring his family, he decided not to run for chairman, he said.

Russell DeLaHunt

"The plain truth is, I've been getting overtired lately and have been making snap judgments, which tells me it's time to turn the reins over to someone else," DeLaHunt explained in a brief statement prepared for presentation Tuesday.

He said he wanted to make the announcement early enough so other supervisors interested in the job can start campaigning.

The chairman's job pays $2,000 a year plus board meeting per diem for a total of about $3,350. There will be no per diem for the chairman under terms of the April raise. Per diem for supervisors will be hiked in April.

DeLaHunt also is chairman of East Central Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission, which he helped form two years ago. He serves on the 10-county commission by virtue of being county board chairman.

Man dies of asphyxiation

WINNECONNE — Accidental carbon monoxide poisoning killed a Neenah man Friday in the new house he was building near here.

The victim was Peter B. Greenwood, 25, 1256 Winchester Road.
